CLASS OF '99.

HISTORY OF NINETY-NINE.

THE time is drawing very near when the Class of '99 must leave the protection of the High School and take its place in the busy world outside the familiar walls. It is not without regret that we turn our backs upon the thousand happy memories of the past four years, and leave behind us the pleasant associations of teachers and pupils.

It was our privilege to enter these dignified portals the same year that Prof. Parker resumed the control of the school. A number of the faculty also took up their duties in that same auspicious year of '95.

As one building of average size was insufficient to contain all our bright ideas, Annex No. 1 was fitted up for occupancy, and the Midway erected, without which our school life would be incomplete.

With an eye to contrast, we chose pink and green as our colors, and adopted a Class yell that might fill volumes, but when the second found us Sophomores we proceeded to change both colors and yell.

The Class of '99 is noted for its love of sociability. Accordingly, after the upper classes held a reception in our honor, we courteously tendered them one in return, thus establishing a custom which has been followed every since. After having our hearts thrilled with the warlike spirit of Cæsar, we turned our attention to the simple flower in all its innocence and beauty. Then to develop the practical side of our natures we solved Geometry originals so credibly that our "fame rose to the stars."

By the time we became Juniors our disposition were so well rounded by the training of the previous year that we were a most exceptional class. Aided by Herr Stedinger, we overcame the obstacles in the way of the German student until we translated as fluently as a native.

The third year passed leaving us Seniors, with the Owl, the Annual, and the Literary Society on our hands. We were always noted for our originality, consequently not wishing to conduct these institutions in the same manner as they had been before us, we changed the management of the school paper admitting the other classes into its control, edited a strictly up-to-date Annual, and—dropped the Literary Society—for a change.

Our Senior year is nearly over now, our High School lesson almost said, we advance now to the higher education, with the hope that your years within these walls may be as enjoyable and profitable as we have experienced, and that you may remember the Class of '99 as loyal pupils of the R. H. S.

CLASS SONG.

The time has come, we soon must part,
Our High School course is nearly run;
And parting pangs assail the heart,
To think our school life here is done;
Although we now must say farewell,
To all our friends and schoolmates dear;
In mem'ry there will ever dwell,
Fond pictures of our school life here.

CHORUS—

Oh, Alma Mater, far from thee,
In after years tho' we may roam;
Remembered then wilt ever be,
Our dear old Rockford High School home.

Four busy years have passed away,
Since first we gathered in these halls;
We've struggled upward day by day,
To scale the heights of learning's walls;
Those happy hours in friendship true,
We've spent together rain or shine;
And now farewell we say to you,
As the Class of 1899.

The following examples attest the truth of the above advertisement. Any one doubting them is respectfully invited to the office to confer with Principal Parker regarding the extent and accuracy of these revelations:

The palm of Mabel Burnett is crossed by many lines, showing that there has been a long line of rejected suitors; that to make these decisions has been hard, but in the future it will be Harter (harder).

Atwood, with his hand upon the tiller,
Will still make love to Bessie Miller.

Mae Furman's lines indicate a strong proclivity for nature study, with an especial fondness for birds, that will soon make her an organizer of Audobon societies throughout the West.

Reading Albert Johnson's future, we see its Early sweetness succeeded by a Post-like hardness that sometimes shows a spark.

The fairest of maids is Carrie Ades,
And Ades on Steward may tend;
O'er her shining hair, with irresistable air,
He will only too frequently bend.

Nelson Hopkin's hand shows patience and diligence, of which he will have need in editing the new Variorum edition of Shakespeare, which he will publish in 1905.

For Mae Hickey we read a great future as an astronomer and student of the starry worlds.

Our Pepper is the spice that shall preserve the class of '99 from staleness.

On Percy Thomas' hand is pictured a Post toward which he tends, and which will eventually be his destination.

For John Sinderson we read world-wide fame as an orator.

In Nina Reynold's future but little is to be seen beyond the stone quarry where she hopes to find her fortune.

The lines on Webster Johnson's hand indicate much wisdom. He will "walk in the trodden paths," and like his famous ancestors, write a dictionary.

Agnes Steinman will join the ever-increasing ranks of school teachers.

The hand of Mabel Mulroy shows a long line of soldiers, prominent among whom is a particularly Frank one.

Such was her fate,
She was Early named,
But came always late.

Marcia VanDuzer's hand reveals a love for the sea, and her preference for the Brig(gs) above all other sailing vessels.

There are summers and Somers which will give place to "a winter of discontent" unless the young ideas are taught-to-shoot.

In Frank Pond's hand we read a decided preference for agriculture, which will lead to his becoming Professor of that department at Madison University.

The malign influence of Mars will cause Violet Johnson to still retain her name, though she will be twice married.

Lena Merlien's hand gives indications of great talent in histrionic lines—she will be particularly successful before the public and will never lack nor fear an audience.

The long lines on Clara Miller's palm indicate the journeys which she will take exhibiting her skill as a pianist.

We read in Inez Thompson's hand a fondness for Martins and even Wilder game.

One reads upon the extended palms the following indications:

Little Mabel at the window
Hazards many a smile,
Though she be a Miller,
She has many a wile.

B. Hill is famous for specimens of granite and gneiss.

Ellen Kjellgren will be added to the long list of Andersons.

Nellie Cross may be encouraged in knowing that she will not always be Cross.

Lillian Lund will star with the German Grand Opera Company.

Vera Sheldon will instruct students in new and original Latin translations

Carrie Hall's lines, which rhyme, indicate that she will become a poetess and win many laurels for our class.

In Alice Brown's hand,
Just at the base,
We see a few lines
That we read "Case."

For Hulda Chindahl we read a brilliant future as a German teacher, her pupils being very much enlivened, as well as instructed, by her originality and wit.

On John Gerber's hand we see pictured numerous kinds of game, the predominating game being Martin.

For Jenny Golden we see fortune and fame, resulting from the discovery of a curling fluid.

The little hand of Sadie Trigg
Though fat and fair is yet not big;
And some lines show she can't remember
Deutsch from English in December.

In Adaline Swarthout's hand the curious cross lines indicate an unusual preponderance of luck, especially in translations; this indicates that she will eventually marry a professor of Latin and Greek and teach summer school.

The reading of Ida Irwin's hand reveals a love of method and order that will eventually lead her to become a prominent state librarian.

The lines on Fred Rightor's hand are artistically arranged, which our experienced eyes read as denoting a career as a magazine illustrator.

Although Edward Shimmin has never studied Latin, yet we read upon his hand an especial liking for that language, his favorite expression being "Vera," (true).

On Elmer Bilsborough's hand is outlined a farm, which will be located in Dakota and will be run by labor-saving machines.

For Joseph Copeland we see the management of Copeland's band, which shall utterly eclipse Sousa's band.

Edith Clark's lines indicate a tenderness, which especially fits her for tying up wounds and mending broken bones.

On Jessie Dobson's hand are numerous culinary articles, the principal one being a Kettle.

The great number of short lines upon Olive Denman's palm indicate a career as stenographer.

The lines on Louise Parmelee's hand are crossed, but in time they will become Wright.

On May Alley's hands the money lines are most conspicuous, and these we regard as certain indications that she will be rich (Reitsch).

On Belle Halley's hand there are lines indicating a career as a great musician, her special preference being Minor (Minard) music.

The mounds upon the palm of Mary Walton denote unusual fluency in her mother tongue—all Latin at sight, she reads aright.

The straight sharp lines found on Gertrude Swingley's hand suggest German letters, and signify further study of her favorite language.

On Cora Palm's hand we read that she will study Roman mythology, her favorite divinity being Eryx (Eric).

The lines on Bessie Hodgson's hand all converge toward a Centre.

The hands of Thomas Scone show a fondness for dates, and we prophesy that he will be an historian.

The lines on Holland Church's hand represent the rivers Styx, Acheron and Lethe, about which he will write a book to rival Dante's Inferno.

CLASS OF '00.

HISTORY OF NINETEEN HUNDRED.

“I LIKES to be jolly, and I alluz is,” seems to be a motto appropriate to Junior Classes in general, and everybody the world over is challenged to find a jollier class than the Naughty-Noughts of the R. H. S.

When we entered the High School, on a September morning in 1896, we came slowly, looking rather suspiciously at the Owl on the top. Once inside, however, we became an important factor of the school. There are many things connected with that year which we will never forget ; class meetings, counting the leaps of the hare and hound, receptions, Latin conjugations, and golden-haired teachers. Then there was the recreation of tearing up waste paper because it was forbidden. And the songs we sang, and how we sang them ! I can still hear the “ vaulted dome ” resound with those thrilling strains, “ The long, long weary day in tears is passed away.” The year was at last ended, and we were Sophomores. We worked hard that year, but succeeded in crossing Cæsar’s bridge in safety and getting over like difficulties. The Geometry certainly accomplished its mission of making us think, for some of our class conceived the brilliant idea of having more dancing parties, and the suggestion was by no means neglected. When June came, we were as far from being wise as ever, but we were soon to be Juniors.

And such Juniors as we have been ! When people pass by below they stop and look up at the windows of Room 10 to see if it is a mad-house—or is that only my imagination ?

Many of us have struggled hard with German, and a few have learned to pronounce the vowels correctly. The four Latin classes of our first year are now reduced to one. Thus it is that the language of the Ancient Romans conquers even the brilliant youth of the nineteenth century. The history has been interesting as well as instructive, and our minds have been broadened by a knowledge of the lives and ambitions of great men.

The year is almost over, and soon we must bid good-bye to our solemn friends the Seniors. Courage, comrades; why should we care if at Commencement the Seniors do bring in some ridiculous caricature of us? Let us say as did Epaminondas of Thebes, "If the office will not reflect honor upon me, I will reflect honor upon it." Then when we become Seniors, let all the world tremble before us!

HISTORY OF NINETEEN-ONE.

INASMUCH as our Sophomore days are drawing to a close and we will, ere long, cease to vie with each other in the role of brilliant Sophomores, it is altogether fitting and proper that the astonishing achievements and deeds of our first years in R. H. S. should be recorded in everlasting annals.

No doubt is there—at least in our own minds—that when we have reached the last round in the ladder of fame in our different professions, that those who shall be called upon to write our biographies will turn to our unparalleled records of the second year in R. H. S. to discern the conditions and causes uniting to give to the world such men and women (?).

Even now it is generally admitted (although there may be a question as to the respect) that our class differs from any other class that has entered the High School as spirit does from matter. But with all due respect to our most worthy predecessors, it is a self-evident fact to all who have closely studied the subject that we are not the “swelled Sophomores” usually encountered, but a quiet, modest, unassuming class, the true indications of latent powers.

Every class that has entered the High School knows the trials and persecutions that must be endured by the Freshman when he first climbs the school hill. Neither is it necessary to recount the manner in which we were received and introduced into the customs of the school. The looks of derision, contempt and indifference cast upon an unfortunate youth can never be forgotten. Think you, the boys will forget the reception given them? Our Freshman year was passed as many another has been, but when we again returned with our Cæsars and Geometries under our arms a new impulse, a new ambition was felt, and what has been the result?

Our class meetings have been very enjoyable to the one or two who have attended, but our receptions have been such a success that we can not give another this year.

The one thing in particular that has stamped our class as a very promising one and distinguished it from all others is the manner in which we have daily trudged through the long "Midway" to English to argue there with flushed cheeks and rapid speech that weighty question to which some men have devoted their lives, "The Immortality of the Soul," causing some to believe that Prof. Falb's prophecy has disturbed us.

"Now let the curtain fall
For we have claimed it all."

Rockford High School, Nineteen-two!

HISTORY OF NINETEEN-TWO.

WHEN the word "history" is mentioned, some people immediately think of "history's dull, gloomy pages," but most people are at once interested if it is the history of their own class. The history of the class of 1902 may be said to have commenced when, one beautiful Monday morning in September, the graduates of the eighth grades all over the city made their way to the old Rockford High School, and seated themselves in the science room. We looked at everything with interest, and I remember seeing through the open door a large crowd of idle spectators craning their necks for a good view, and now and then exchanging sly words and knowing looks as if something unusual was going on.

The next few days the puzzling work of arranging these boys and girls of all ages and sizes into their proper classes went on. How queer we felt in the big assembly room, and how proud to think that we just filled it !

This class was more partial to the English than to the Latin course, there being two Latin classes and three English. In a few days we began to feel more at home, and had a kindly feeling for our fellow pupils, the majority of whom either gave us a warm welcome or left us alone. Some changes were made this year in allowing the Freshmen to take their part in the management of the "Owl" and other school projects, which of course was duly appreciated. Perhaps I should not neglect to say that some of the Freshmen took their part in other ways for the amusement of certain in the school. As I was coming to school one day, I saw some big boys whom I concluded to be Freshmen "running the gauntlet." I also heard reports that one of the old-time school customs was annually revived, and big boys (not the first-year boys) fond of playing in the water kindly included the "Freshies" in their sport, and when they were through forgot to turn the water off; which, of course, must not be laid to the Freshmen. Another story circulated that some of the upper classmen wishing something to break the monotony of their quiet lives, politely requested the accomplished Freshmen to display their talents in the line of singing and dancing a slight variation perhaps in the old way. But all this was but as a bubble on the surface; underneath was the steady current of earnest work.

We took a little righteous pride in the fact that we were the largest entering class on the records of the Central High School, being over 150 strong.

On September 22 we held our first meeting for the purpose of effecting a class organization, which was not completed until several meetings had been held. We did not have unseemly strife over the election of our officers, but got rather excited by the time we had finally chosen our class yell and class colors.

During those first few months many of us attended the after-school receptions in Miss Brown's room for the purpose of becoming better acquainted with the numerous family of Physical Geography, and some of us found it difficult to recognize some of its members in their various disguises.

On a certain Friday night in the early part of December, occurred an event in our history to be noted, namely: a reception given in our honor, or rather, given to the Sophomore and Freshman classes to welcome the Freshmen. It is safe to say that we enjoyed it, the play, which was very funny, the ever-delightful dance and the games so thoroughly provided.

In return, the Sophomores with our help, entertained the two upper classes one Saturday evening in January, and we did our best to give them a pleasant evening. In February we held our regular class-meeting for the election of new officers. We proceeded with so little waste of time that by half-past three we were adjourned.

Since the fall we have increased our ranks until we have numbered 166, and please don't cast slighting remarks about "quality's seldom found with quantity," for who knows but some genius may even now be living among us, waiting some future day to discover? Our history has not been remarkable so far, but nevertheless, we have done some good work not put down in black-and-white. And I beg of you, ye dignified(?) Seniors, jolly Juniors, and think-they-know-it-all(?) Sophomores, do recollect the time when you were Freshmen, and also remember that at the beginning of anything is not the time for criticism; for the end is now, and "all's well that ends well."

M. P. S. 1902.

STUDENT CONTROL.

AMONG enlightened peoples all true governmental powers originate in the will of the governed. Because the Indian is incapable of complex government, our nation has from the beginning exercised a guardianship over him.

History. The history of the human race shows a gradual movement through the stages which lead up to a republican form of civil government, and evidences are not wanting to prove that the same law of evolution has been operative in the development of the school and its methods of control. The days of despotism and brute force have passed away to be succeeded by a just and considerate faculty administration, and this in turn is giving way to the latest and most republican of all—student government.

Like all that is valuable and lasting, this has not been attained in a day, nor is it the product of a single mind. Doubtless the necessity that led to Dr. Arnold's methods of discipline at Rugby was similar to that which produced this, a movement for which his time was not ready.

PRESENT OFFICERS OF STUDENT CONTROL.

History also shows that the amount of crime is greatest where punishment is most inhuman, and this is true in school as well as in civil life.

With the advent of more democratic methods of control, hazing in our colleges has rapidly decreased, and we may safely hope that in the near future it shall cease to be practised.

Under the old monarchic system it often happened that students were arrayed against the faculty, and it became a question of strategy or stubbornness as to which should finally win. Such an environment tends to encourage lawlessness and to give the law-breaker the standing of a hero.

Like considerations led Principal Ray, of the John Crerar Grade School of Chicago, and Prof. French, of the Hyde Park High School, to organize their respective student bodies into fac simile municipal corporations with legislative, executive and judicial powers.

Our own Prof. Parker was not slow to see the benefits of the plan, and early in the present year advised its adoption by the boys of the R. H. S. Accordingly a constitution was framed which after discussion and some change was adopted, and it has proven a safe foundation upon which to build our government. Its preamble declares that its object shall be: "To provide a method of student control which shall promote the spirit of equality and fraternity among the boys of Rockford High School, and to maintain such order in the basement and around the buildings and grounds as shall advance the good name of the student body and the school."

Description. The chief executive officer is the mayor, and in order to qualify he must carry at least fifteen hour's work per week and maintain a standing therein of 75 per cent.

The Legislative body consists of the mayor and council, the latter composed of two aldermen elected from each of the three upper classes, three from the Freshman Class and two from the Faculty.

The Judiciary consists of five judges, one from each class and one from the Faculty. This court has jurisdiction over all cases involving violation of laws made in accordance with this constitution.

Incidentally, also, it has the power to pass upon the constitutionality of any law ordained by the council.

The other general officers are the clerk and attorney, whose term, like that of all the rest, is for one semester.

All elections are by ballot, as are the nominations in caucus.

The officials chosen for the first semester were :

Mayor—Le Roy Richardson.

Clerk—John Green.

Attorney—Edgar M. Swan.

Aldermen—Frank Cutler, Walter Green, Webster Johnson, Oscar Ross, Thomas McGrath, Albert Johnson, Robert Kimball, Jno. Vincer, Harold Holmquist, Wm. A. Lewis and Lyle Brower.

Judges—Samuel Andrews, Joseph Porter, Harold Beale, Wm Hayes and E. J. Andrews.

At the meeting following his inauguration the mayor appoints eight marshals subject to confirmation by the council, and the duties of these are to enforce law and arrest offenders.

Results. At first, as with all new machinery, the parts must needs become adjusted one to the other, but the boys were in earnest, and the fact that some were bent on discrediting the new order served but to make it more aggressive and thorough. For two months violations of law were not uncommon, but arrest and prosecution inevitably followed until the new government had secured that strongest support of all government, the sanction of custom. Then it ceased to be an innovation and was thoroughly respected.

No less important to the state than respect for law, is the individual sense of responsibility for the good of all, and this we are securing, together with a spirit of unity between Faculty and students such as could probably be attained in no other way.

The requirement of a definite standard of work in qualifying for office has proven a wise measure, and has perhaps helped the boys over some very hard lessons.

Always the best proof of the truth of a theory is its practical success, and if introduced with a proper regard for time and circumstances we believe "Student Control" will ever stand the test.

It has lately been proposed to admit the girls to citizenship and give them the ballot and some of the minor offices, but we are not sure they would care to vote or to hold office, and we shall perhaps experiment slowly in this direction. Meanwhile we are learning by actual experience the workings of city government.

THE OWL.

OWING to the great responsibility which would be placed upon the Senior class in making it financially responsible for the success of the Owl, the paper was changed from a class to a school affair. Under the new management the four classes should share in paying the deficit in case the management should not be able to make it financially successful. In order to give the classes representation, assistant editors were taken from each class, to see that the best interests of each class were upheld.

Relying upon this new system of support, the editor and business manager have had more confidence in the management of the paper, and feel that this year they have done the best possible under the circumstances. Although with the aid of the Board of Control, the Business Manager has been able to make the paper something of a financial success, those who have had constantly upon their minds the literary management feel that not enough support has been given the editors to make the paper the success that they could have wished.

But we should not say however that the paper has not been a success in a literary way. Some very good numbers have been gotten out, and the interests of the school have always been the primary aim of the publication. In one department, however, the editors feel that the paper can hardly be called a great success. The locals this year have not been so good as usual. In criticizing this part of the paper, no criticism can be given to the reporters. All have done the best that they were able, and had to work against fearful odds. For if the sentiment of the class does not seem to uphold this part of the paper, they should not expect that department

THE literary contest between the boys and girls which was planned some weeks ago, has been given up. Although we are sorry to be obliged to abandon the undertaking, it is perhaps better that it was not carried out. Owing to the approach of commencement the Seniors have their time well occupied and other matters are attracting the attention of the other classes.

On Friday, May 1st, the annual inter-state oratorical contest was held at Champaign. The representatives of the Rockford High School were: Mabel B. Church, Lyon Weyburn, and Jesse McClatchey. They were all successful in their respective classes. The contest was held at this time from behind the hotel and the face of the building was visible.

to enter the contest. A committee of judges was appointed for April. The best ten orations, which will be allowed to be read at the athletic meet, were chosen. The most successful in the contest last March, was successful in securing representation for the High School, and will do his best to bring the silver cup back with him for the safe keeping of the R. H. S. The ten schools to be represented at Champaign at East Aurora, Camp Peck, Carroll, Waukegan, West Aurora, Woodstock, Rockford, Bloomington, and Tuscola.

In accordance with the plan chosen by Mr. Case for selection of editors for the Annual, the following were chosen: Mabel B. Church, Lyon Weyburn, and Jesse McClatchey. The editors have met and have chosen for the best Annual the students of the Rockford High School. It is more of a success than any other, and every pupil is urged to subscribe. If you are not a subscriber, you can become one by your school. The opportunity to read the Annual is a great opportunity to read the Annual. will be as good as possible. Reporters cannot report unless there be something to report, and when the subscribers do not seem to be inclined to be funny, the reporters are not to be criticized.

More might be said about the failings of this year's Owl, but space will not permit more to be said in that direction. We can truthfully say that the editors have labored conscientiously and should not be censured for the imperfections.

The Business Manager, Mr. Albert Penfield, has filled that important and responsible position excellently. In spite of the fact that subscriptions have not been numerous, Mr. Penfield by his energy and conscientiousness has been able to realize for the paper a surplus greater than has ever been received during the history of the High School paper.

The Owl for the class of '99 has at last folded its wings and ceased to hoot. But we hope that the force of next year will make many improvements, realize even greater profits and experience fewer discouragements than have been encountered by the editors of the Owl for 1899.

ORATORICAL AND LITERARY.

ORATORY.

AN annual feature of the literary work of the High School is the oratorical contest. This contest is for the selection of a candidate whose oration is to be sent to the State University at Champaign. The High Schools on the University accredited list are each privileged to send one oration. The merits of these are judged by a board chosen for that purpose. The ten best orations are chosen, the candidates writing these orations becoming the representatives of their respective High Schools.

The preliminary contest in this city was held on the evening of March 24th, in the Christian Union auditorium. The various contestants were all hopeful, but only one could win first honors, and the judges required a half hour for the selection of this one. Their deliberations resulted in the choice of Mr. Edward Weld for first place, and Miss Leah Hare for second place.

The boy's prize was a leather purse containing a five dollar bill. The girl's prize was a silver chain purse, containing a five dollar gold piece. These prizes were kindly offered by Mrs. W. F. Barnes, who takes much interest in the High School work. Mrs. Rew in a speech entirely befitting the occasion gave the decision of the judges and awarded the prizes. The judges were Rev. B. E. S. Ely, Mrs. Robert Rew and Mr. A. D. Early.

Word was received shortly after the contest that Rockford's oration was one of the ten selected, the writers of which should appear at Champaign on May 19, and deliver their orations. On this date Edward W. Weld, the Rockford representative, delivered his oration before a large assembly. East Aurora has held the cup since last year's contest. Mr. Weld's work was of the highest merit, and was so found by the judges; and Rockford High School is now the proud possessor of the State High School prize, a beautiful silver cup. This the High School holds for one year, and longer if it earns it. Much praise is due Mr. Weld for securing first place for Rockford, and to Mr. Parker for his untiring attention to the training of the prize-winner.

LITERARY.

AN event that occasioned no little interest in literary affairs was a contest offered by the Register-Gazette to the pupils of the High School. A list of sixty questions was prepared, the merits of answers and grammar or language to be judged in awarding the prizes. The contest closed April 10th, and on May 12th Mr. Eaton, making appropriate remarks, delivered the prizes before an assembly of the whole school. Mr. Chester Righter won the first prize, a set of Kipling. The second prize, Dr. Holmes' "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," was won by Miss Mable Golden. The third prize, Hammerton's "Intellectual Life," was awarded to Mr. Robert Whipple; the fourth prize, Greene's "Historical View of the American Revolution," to Miss Lulu Edwards, and the fifth prize, "Hon. Peter Sterling," to Miss Mary Sheldon. The various contestants numbered their answer lists and deposited their number with Prof. Parker, thus leaving the judges to decide in an entirely impartial way, by numbers. The announcements of the prize-winners were received with loud applause by the school, and Mr. Eaton was given a vote of thanks for his interest in high school work.

MANUAL TRAINING.

IT is gratifying to know that the past year in the manual training department has been a prosperous one, owing to the liberal assistance of those in authority and the well sustained interest of our citizens. The progress has been highly satisfactory and the results are encouraging. Manual training has become a permanent institution in our schools.

The course has been extended to include the seventh and eighth grammar grades, and with the two years in the High School the system of instruction now covers a period of four years. Additional equipment has been supplied, so that the boys are fairly well provided with everything necessary to procure the best results. As yet no provision has been made for the girls, and it is earnestly hoped that before long they too will have a place in the work and be given a chance to demonstrate their abilities in the rudiments of cooking and sewing, as well as practice the finer arts of wood-carving and clay modeling.

A system of instruction is given commencing in the grades with elementary woodwork and continued in the first year of the High School, with cabinet-making, including inlaying, carving, polishing, and a series of exercises in wood-turning; and in the second year with pattern-making, moulding and casting, and work in iron.

The course opens with very simple exercises introducing the use of tools, after which comes a series of graded models that increase in difficulty as the work progresses, for the successful completion of each must depend upon the skill that has been acquired in the previous work; so that the instructions may be carried on in a systematic manner from simple to complex. Yet even in the preliminary work each model forms in itself a complete object, having a meaning and use, as this appeals much more to the interest and enthusiasm of the younger boys, who can see no "fun" in making a series of dry joints, though otherwise the making of the joints might be made to possess more value. For to obtain the best effects upon the pupil this work must be done voluntarily and enthusiastically, as the little fellows do not realize what they are doing with them, but believe it to be, as one said, "just fun." Where the boys are older and the work much more advanced, joints illustrating the principles of the different models are given as preparatory exercises.

As the ability to manipulate tools with skill varies greatly with different boys, extra models, involving in a more intricate form or illustrating the application of the principles of the regular models, are provided for the more rapid workers, in order that every one may keep fully occupied, for this is one of the studies where the pupils are not satisfied with doing "just as much as the rest," but each wishes to do all he is capable of. With the older students the exercises may be chosen to suit the needs of the individual. Yet it is not he who finishes the greater number of models or accomplishes the more difficult tasks that has gained the most from manual training. If any student works faithfully, earnestly and conscientiously throughout the entire course and has completed but few models and those to the very best of his ability, he will have secured just as much if not more benefit from the work than one who has been able to perform more, simply because he chanced to be more handy with the use of tools.

But the finished model is not the end which manual training seeks to attain. Manual training, as it is generally understood in the United States, is in some respects an unfortunate term, as it is inadequate to express all it is intended to convey. It is not, as many are led to believe, "technical" nor "industrial" training, but has an educational rather than an economic value. It is a system of brain development. Other departments of our schools deal with the brain only as it regards thought, while here we seek to train the "motor" portion that the boy may be better enabled to think and to

DO. The germ of manual training is in the kindergarten, and from there it should continue through all the grades into the High School. For it is in the earliest years of the child's life that the most can be accomplished. The work must be so graded that the pupil will be kept THINKING. Each new model must introduce something in advance, something new, that the work may not become mechanical, for the moment this occurs it ceases to be manual training, and becomes industrial or technical education, and simply the acquirement of skill, or loses the "educational" for the "economic" value.

Manual training is training "power of expressing thought by construction." Children are naturally creative. It is the development of the two things so important in dealing with the problems of life, judgment and executive faculty. As one has said, "We are too accustomed to think that education consists of knowledge of books, and that the only way of training the child is through his eye by means of the printed page. No one can understand this age who confines himself to books, and we do well to take account of the brain development that may be secured by the practice of those arts which train the body as well as the mind, which stir the blood and arouse a vigorous activity throughout the whole being. We hear repeatedly the praises sung of the poet and the orator, and they deserve their praises; but high ideals and beautiful fancies are oft-times quite as truly carved in wood, wrought in iron or graven in brass as written in ink.

In attempting to describe the wondrously beautiful paintings and sculptures of the old masters or the noble temples of Greece, even books fail for want of words.

ATHLETICS

FOOTBALL.

Rockford High School is fortunate in having a faculty whose interest in athletics is large, and whose enthusiasm and generous support have done much to encourage a like spirit among students. With our Athletic Association fully established and plenty of good material at hand, we feel that success for the future is well assured.

Only three of the football team of '98 remained in school, Richardson, Ross and Glenny, but these made up in earnestness what they lacked in numbers, and soon gathered around themselves a sufficient number of sturdy fellows to form a new eleven. The first day's practice, Sept. 5, was held on the fair grounds, and thirty candidates presented themselves. There were few heavy ones, however, and the playing naturally was swift rather than strong. Those chosen on the team, with their positions, etc., were as follows :

NAME.	POSITION.	HEIGHT.	WEIGHT.	AGE.
ROSS	End	5 ft. 6	150	18
COTTON	End	5 ft. 9	150	18

With continual practice the boys were ready for their first game Oct. 1st. This was played with Marengo on our own grounds. It started with Marengo kicking off. Rockford secured the ball and by two minutes of fast playing had made their first touchdown. Our three strongest men in this game were Richardson and Crill, who played half back, and Andrews, who played full back. At the end of the first half the score was 25-0 in our favor, and at the close we had raised our number to 39. Of course the boys were encouraged; so also were their friends. The team had shown speed, strength and ability, and we were confident of their future.

On Oct. 8th the Belvidere team came over, bringing their own referee. This gentleman evidently had not enjoyed the advantage of a perusal of the '99 rules, and his decisions were made accordingly. The visiting team compared favorably with ours in weight, but for rag-chewing they beat the record. At the close of the first half the superb suits with which our boys had commenced the game were in tatters, owing to these fierce maxillary onslaughts, which were held by the referee to be an adjunct of the contest. However, it mattered not. When all had been said and done the score stood 15-0 in favor of Rockford.

On the following Saturday our team went to Marengo, where they were cordially received and royally entertained. After dining at the Barnes House they felt themselves ready to meet anything that might present itself. Nothing did, however, until the game was called. Capt. Richardson won the "toss up," and gave Marengo the first kick off. Here Glenny made his first appearance as half back, and his playing was excellent. Andrews was seriously hurt during the first half, but persisted in playing until time was called. Earl Wilson played half for first time also, but though he made several gains, his playing showed that his place was in the line, and from that time on he played tackle. At one time, when Marengo had the ball within a foot of goal, Bartlett, by some mysterious play known only to himself, got it away, and thus saved Rockford's clean record, the score at the close being 17-0. Then our boys yelled and went to supper. During this meal they were entertained with a cake-walk by Dicky Diamond the mascot and Clarence Simons the trainer. When train time arrived some of the boys were at the depot, but Glenny, who carried the tickets, was not there. This necessitated a wait until three o'clock in the morning, and Prof. Lewis waited with the rest. The long, long hours were passed in a variety of ways. Some tried to sleep, but failed, others took advantage of the opportunity for seeing the town, while still others, having met some of Marengo's fair maidens, were pleasantly entertained by them; and as a result some of our boys are still writing letters which are addressed to that city. At eleven o'clock all the electric lights went out and quiet reigned till the train came. "All aboard" called the conductor, which was a signal for a general rough-house. This put everybody in a happy frame of mind and prevented any from sleeping while the train was in motion, which of course would have been a foolish and highly dangerous thing to do under the circumstances. They reached home without further incident.

The next game was played with the alumni team, for the benefit of the Army and Navy League, on Oct. 27th. The day was chilly, but several hundred spectators were present. Among the alumni were such heavy and experienced men as Holt, Anderson, Ethridge, and Brogunier, who appeared like giants when lined up against our team. But we had been well trained under the leadership of Clark of '97, who coached us all the rest of the season, and realizing the odds against us, resolved to do our best at least. Richardson won the "toss up" and chose goal. With the ball in our possession we by a series of six plays went around and through the alumni line with apparent ease, and advanced half way up the field when we lost the ball on downs. Then the giants indulged in a knowing smile and with prompt foresight counted on several successive touch downs which, however, can not be found upon the record at this time. Our boys having found the actual strenth of their opponents, were no longer overawed by their commanding presence, and now rushed upon them like young whirlwinds, pushing Andrews through their line and securing a touch down. Then the crowd went wild. Andrews also kicked the goal and pandemonium reigned again. For the rest of the game we held them to the middle of the field, thus closing the score at 6-0. After this R. H. S. Football stock sold at a premium.

On Nov. 5th at Evansville, Wis., we met our first defeat at the overwhelming rate of 45-5. We beg leave to present a few of the reasons therefor, to an indulgent public. First, the Evansville boys were heavy, very heavy, indeed, we may say they were ponderous and massive, as those who have been underneath can testify. Second, the team has played together for three years, which is a great factor of strength. Third and last, they were coached by Gregg, the great quarter-back of U. of W.

On the same day Pennsylvania was beaten by Cornell, and Beloit was overcome by the Rush Medical College team, so we at least had good company.

Our seventh game was played at Belvidere, whither we went on November 12th, taking along about seventy-five "rooters" and some of the fair R. H. S. girls. Our friends were not disappointed, and found abundant opportunity to exercise their vocal organs, thus adding not a little to the interest of the game. Two inches of snow made the ground wet and slippery. Starting with the ball in their possession our boys, by fast and skillful work, soon pushed Andrews across the line, and this was quickly followed by Richardson making a sixty-yard run and securing a second touchdown. The tackling by Rockford was fine. During the last half Belvidere rallied and the ball staid near the center of the field. When time was called all the players were wet and covered with mud, but nothing could dampen their enthusiasm. In the evening a splendid reception was given them, and Belvidere people vied with each other in making the evening pleasant, so that we were willing at least to award them the palm for hospitality. Our train was due at two a. m., but being twenty minutes late a rough-house was indulged in for half of that time.

The last game of the season was played at home, with our old enemy, the Evansvilles. The boys, worn by long and victorious service, rallied like brave warriors against a strong foe, and determined to die fighting. Richardson lost the toss, as in the previous game with the Wisconsin boys. Every inch of ground was bravely contested, but superior strength won, as before. McMasters, the referee, declared, however, that we showed the highest degree of scientific ability he had ever seen in a High School game. The Evansville team stayed for the reception in the evening, and all old enmities were forgotten in the pleasure of the hour. Thus we shall leave them, offering as we do this humble contribution to the worthy record they have made.

Of all the aggregation, Andrews was the man
Who stood like granite on the field, though everybody ran.
Carrico was steady, and never lost his grip,
Bartlett, fat and saucy, never let them slip.
"Happy Jack" was speedy and Glenney wiggled through,
Any way to get there, how, we never knew.
"Richie" was the captain, a good, well-natured lad,
Wilson was a scrapper, and scrapping was his fad.
"Parson" Weld, a heavy man, could hold the foe at bay,
Woodruff was phenomenal, and never ran away.
Green was light and graceful, polite and always neat,
Cutler in a shuffle seldom lost his feet.
"Wringer" Wilson knew his place and kept it pretty well,
"Doodle" Vincer tackled too, of whom there's much to tell.
But space forbids that much be said about these heroes true,
Cotton, Ross and Lindoff, yes, and Edwards, too.
When Fame from off some mountain top shall read her little list,
We're sure that Simpson will be there and rank among the best.

TRACK TEAM.

The season of '99 has been a cold one for out-door athletics, and there has been small opportunity for practice, but on the whole the boys did well in the Field Day contests. And now, kind reader, before proceeding we wish to thank you for having followed our history through a year's vicissitudes, and hope (not vainly, we trust) that your interest has been enlisted in High School athletics. Nor would we forget our gentle friends, the members of the A. A. A, but would bespeak for them a kindly support and generous spirit of helpfulness. All great movements have their beginnings, and we trust the girls will carry on what they have begun. When a new building is realized we fondly expect it to contain a gymnasium which shall be equipped for the use of both associations, but until then we must make the best of our present facilities. It does not help matters to complain for what we may not have. J. Kendrick Bangs, one of Napoleon's generals, grumbled about the lack of good water during the Egyptian campaign. "Why do you not drink milk?" asked Bonaparte. "Sire," he replied, "where shall I get it?" "Why, from the dairy," of course." "But, sire, there is none." "I referred," answered Bony, with a far-away look in his eyes, "to the dromedary." There were no more complaints for some time.

And now we append for reference the list of officers and the constitution and by-laws of our Athletic Association, believing that a casual examination at least of the latter will be worth your while. At the same time we may be pardoned for indulging in the fond hope that the benefit of our efforts shall not pass with us from our Alma Mater, but may in the years to come be a source of inspiration and help to our successors.

THE A. A. A.

THE idea of Boys' Associations in school is very common. Nearly every High School has an Athletic Association at least, to which only boys belong. The girls of the R. H. S. thought it time a change be made, and therefore nine girls assembled to talk over a plan of coalition.

They decided to call a meeting on September twenty-sixth, at which the election of officers for the year would take place. The meeting was held upon the day previously set, and resulted in the election of the following officers:

LILLIAN RICHARDSON, President.

LOUISE MORROW, Vice-President.

GERTRUDE SWINGLEY, Secretary.

OLIVE DENMAN, Treasurer.

It was decided that the Club be represented by the letters A. A. A., which should signify Auxiliary Athletic Association, and the aim of this organization was to promote interest in athletics among the girls.

On September twenty-eighth and October eighth Professor Lewis gave interesting talks on "Football." Closely following these came the thoughts of Physical Culture, which were well received by the organization, and committees for general arrangements were appointed.

Several rooms in the North Annex were appropriated for this use, and Mr. Hughes was secured as instructor. The large number of girls attending made it necessary to have two divisions, each class meeting two afternoons of each week, immediately after school.

The advantages for Physical Culture were very limited. The necessary amount of room was lacking, and also the proper means of ventilation, and therefore, after several lessons, the interest of the girls rapidly decreased. The plan was finally abandoned, with the hope that it some time might be renewed when the proper conveniences could be supplied.

The President, on account of change of residence, was obliged to tender her resignation, which was accepted by the Association, and Nina Reynolds was elected in her stead.

Another object of the A. A. A. was to aid the Boys' Athletic Association in all ways possible, and although never called upon to perform any difficult tasks, they succeeded in gaining an increased sale of tickets for the football games, by which, it was shown that it was harder for the citizens of Rockford to refuse the fair members of the A. A. A. than those of the Athletic Association.

Although we feel that the work of this year has fallen short of the ideal, we hope to have started an idea which will progress with each succeeding class, and establish a firmer union of the girls which may remain permanent through the history of the R. H. S.

EDITORIALS.

THE ANNUAL BOARD was so late in being chosen, that, to issue the book before the close of school, the editors have been forced to "PUSH THINGS" hard. Do not read THE ANNUAL over your neighbor's shoulder, who paid for the privilege of perusal, and then say it does not

"COME UP TO THE SCRATCH."

It is the duty of every loyal student to subscribe, and carefully

"LOOK THROUGH"

and acknowledge that we have put our "BEST FOOT FORWARD,"

EDITORS OF THE ANNUAL.

There are two things the High School is in special need of, and we rise to ask why, in voting for improvements, the city council has overlooked us so long? For several years the faculty has been embarrassed for want of room. There are nearly five hundred students enrolled, and the main building will conveniently accommodate but about three hundred. For lack of room the city has rented two annexes—one on each side of the R. H. S. building. The "Great Northern" annex is quite a respectable building, and it is lots of fun, during icy weather, to go coasting down the walk that connects it with the main building, on our way to classes. During stormy weather the students, while passing to and fro, are protected from the weather by the cute little railings on either side. The walk, popularly called "Midway," leading to the "Only Original" annex, which is on the south, is a little better, as it is covered. It is also well ventilated. But the "Only Original" annex is a disgrace to the city, to say the least.

If we are successful in obtaining a new building—and the prospects are bright—the other pressing need will be obviated. For some time we've been trying to think of some place where those empty beer barrels that are found from time to time in the south room of the "Only Original Annex" might be stored. We don't believe in mentioning names, but we thought may be it was our duty to suggest that if we had a new building there would be no more use for the "only Original Annex," and it might make a good place to store barrels.

* * *

If you see misspelled words note correct spelling in the new Century Dictionary. If any names are found to be omitted, see the latest biographical dictionary.

THE ANNUAL management has been greatly embarrassed because of the limited time in which it must accomplish its work. We wish to impress upon the Class of '00 the great advantage to be derived from selecting THE ANNUAL Board at the beginning of the Senior year.

It is with extreme delight that we grasp this opportunity of congratulating the EDITOR of THE OWL on his conscientiousness. One evening a city paper stated that he was able to speak five languages, whereas he was conversant with but four. The same evening the EDITOR borrowed a Portuguese grammar and learned the fifth language. If every one were as conscientious as the EDITOR there would be fewer "newspaper lies."

EXTRA.

S. B. H. S. FIELD DAY.

The Third of June should henceforth be marked with a red letter in the calendar of the Rockford High School Track team.

When the Belvidere athletes challenged the R. H. S. to a field meet they made a fatal step. Our noble old school responded even to the girls, and a crowd of over sixty rooters, half of whom were fair maidens, also many of the faculty, accompanied the victorious team. Once in Belvidere nothing daunted our Rockford lads, since the girls filled up the street cars, the boys chartered an express wagon and rode to the contest in "a carriage."

The Belvidere athletic association invited twenty schools, but of these only five were represented, i. e. Belvidere, Marengo, Freeport, Dixon and Rockford. In the various events Rockford won first place in the 100 yd. dash, 50 yd. dash, mile bicycle,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile bicycle, 220 yd. dash, 120 yd. hurdle, high kick and relay race; second in the 100 yd. dash, mile bicycle,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile bicycle, 120 yd. hurdle, high kick,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile run, and shot put; third in  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile run, pole vault, hammer throw, shot put, and running high jump making 67 points in all. Marengo came next with 36, then Belvidere with 20, and Dixon with 12.

Time and again Rockford's admirers made the grand stand ring with the High School yells while cheering on her heroes. The track was poor but the Rockford giants seemed to care for nothing.

The last but by no means the least important event was the  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile relay race to be run in 220 yd. dashes. For this event Belvidere summoned up all her force, for the prize was no less than a handsome banner made by their fair feminine friends and prized accordingly.

Rockford knowing this, put forth her best effort. Crill was selected for the first dash, Richardson second, Weld third, and Glenny was trusted for the last. Crill was started in the lead, running as "Jack" knows how, Richardson followed with a fine sprint, leaving his opponents far in the rear, but before his two-twenty was reached they had gained to within a few feet, Weld set a hot pace and threw off the Marengo man, it all lay now between Rockford and Belvidere. Glenny and the Belvidere man came half way down the course together, but Belvidere couldn't run fast enough, and Glenny putting his best sprint forward left the poor man, and now the Belvidere banner hangs in our Assembly room. The names of the seven unfortunate Belvidere maids whose fingers worked so skillfully are written beneath.

In the evening the Belvidere boys entertained their visitors handsomely at Adelphi hall. A full orchestra provided music and dancing was indulged in until, all too soon, the time arrived for Rockford's special train to bear the victors and their spoils away.

A hearty cheer was given at parting by the Rockford delegation for the right royal treatment received while at Belvidere.

ROCKFORD BUSINESS COLLEGE.

It is with Colleges, as with Men, Not so Much a Question of Appearance, as of Reality: Special Reason—Why Those Desiring a High Class Commercial Training, Should Attend the Rockford Business College.

Our College is up to date in facilities and progressive in high grade class work and modern business methods reflecting the best uses of the modern business house, and a faculty of teachers of many year's experience to give instruction in the different departments of study and practice over which they preside.

We teach our students to become self reliant by presenting to them a course of study and methods of conducting their business transactions that will be very valuable to those who may desire to complete a course of business training in our school. A student is made to rely upon himself as much as possible, and a business education is a sure stepping-stone to the highest success. It is said the "will power is nine-tenths of our possibilities." The most successful men of our country are those who have given their time and attention to the extension of commerce and in early life learned to rely upon themselves.

There is no better legacy that can be given young people than a practical education, for it is not only a value in itself but it is the practical side of all education and an element of power and usefulness increasing in value from year to year.

A large per centage of our students the past year have been placed in good paying positions with good Commercial Houses in Rockford, Chicago and many other cities of the northwest, as teachers, book-keepers, office stenographers and typewriters.

Call and see us or write for catalogue or circulars which will be kindly mailed to you free upon application.

Very Respectfully,
