PROLOGUE

THE Annual, a picture of the work and play of the year. As our men in the service have worked for their country, so have we who remained in school. May those who follow us continue to serve, and may we who are departing forever be loyal to our country and our Alma Mater. To all who have helped make this volume of the Annual a success, on the staff and in the student body, the Annual Board here expresses its thanks and appreciation.

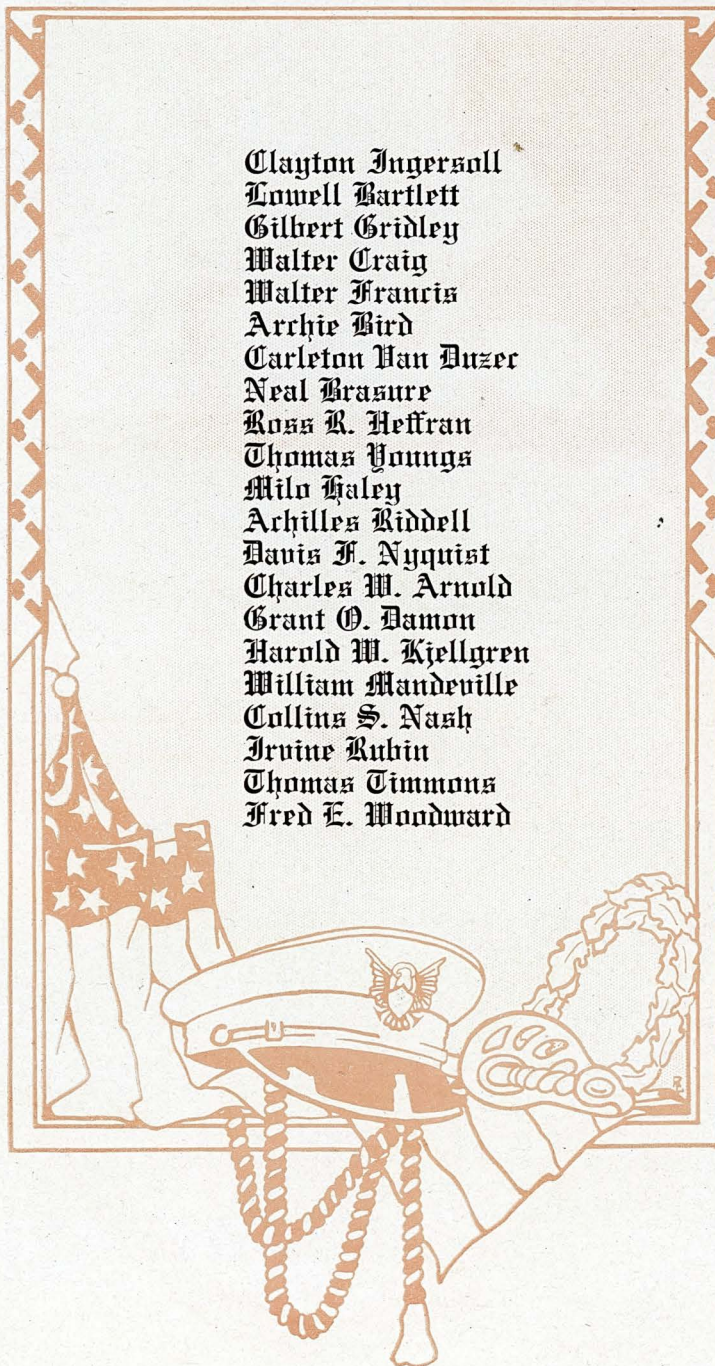

Dedication

To our service stars, the blue and gold, to all who have given their services in this great struggle, we sacredly accord the dedication of the 1919 Annual.

“1919” Class Poem.

In word and deed, in song and verse,
Nineteen shall ever live;
The school will long remember works
That were our joy to give.
In school and ballroom, gym or track,
We ever took the lead,
Both boys and girls worked well to make
Us live in word and deed.
The years we spent in Rockford High
Were filled with joys untold;
Full many a happy day we knew
The class of green and gold.
The years may come, the years may go,
And many a class be seen,
But never a class from here shall pass
More worthy than nineteen.
For when the bugle's blast was blown
We heard our country's call,
And many to the gun did spring,
Unfearing, to give all.
We're loyal ever to the school,
As ev'ry class should be;
And not as many but as one,
Our class shall ever be.
The years may all behind us fall,
But thru life's sea, serene,
United then, as thru all time,
Will be our class, NINETEEN.

History of 1919

SEPTEMBER 1915 saw the beginning of a new epoch at Rockford High School, for at that time the class that was destined to be the peer of them all, started on its brilliant and successful career. Green and gold were chosen as the class colors while the motto, "Not at the top but climbing" was selected as characteristic of the class spirit. By the time they were Sophomores, members of the 1919 class could be found industriously engaged in all the activities of the school. As Juniors, they made a specialty of war work, some enlisting, others aiding the Red Cross by doing such things as making dressings and collecting books for the sick. The Senior year was a most unusual one on account of the "flu" epidemic which came in the midst of the football season. However, at the beginning of the second semester, they made up for the unfortunate loss of time and carried on their studies and school activities with the "pep" and enthusiasm which had ever before been one of their most decided characteristics.

From the day they first entered Room 2 to begin their high school career, until now, when they are about to leave their Alma Mater forever, they have aimed to give in proportion to what they have taken. It has been their desire to be able to say that when the class of 1919 passed over the threshold of Rockford High School, it left the memory of many deeds and achievements not soon to be forgotten.

“Beaucoup de Mixup”

By THEODORA VAN DE MARK

AS an ornament, the big, impressive clock above the city hall of Lockhaven, New Hampshire, was fully worth its original heavy price; as a time piece, however, it was thoroly exasperating. In spite of all efforts to retard it, it persisted in keeping ahead of time. The butcher used to say to anxious strangers hurrying trainwards, “No hurry! That clock’s two years fast already!”

Polly Edwards was precisely like the clock—always ahead of time. If she had an appointment to keep, she was always found restlessly appearing at least twenty minutes ahead of time. She was a small, thin, dark, vividly enthusiastic young person of fifteen, and just as it was impossible to retard the clock sufficiently, so it was futile with Polly.

In school she was ahead of her class in credits, as was Barbara Worthington, her chum. Before their junior year, Polly and Bab had been a little too busy to get into mischief, but now, with so little work to do, Polly especially became a disturbing element in what had previously been a surprisingly quiet, well-behaved school.

Just before Polly became a sophomore, a new principal had been appointed. One of the first steps that Mr. Graham took upon assuming his new duties was to ask the school board to authorize football for the boys and basket ball for the girls. The board had been adamant in its opposition at first, but football had finally triumphed. At the beginning of Polly’s junior year, the august members finally agreed to give the girls a month’s trial with basket ball; if they survived the first month without serious mishap, the board promised to regard the question more favorably. At the end of the month, permission was accorded for another four-week trial.

Unfortunately at this juncture Mr. Graham found it necessary to be out of town. Upon the shoulders of little Mr. Peasley, the science teacher, devolved the task in the interim of keeping sixty-nine restless young people in order. Now Mr. Peasley knew all about mathematics and bugs and flowers and queer-smelling acids, but he knew nothing about how to keep even a small class of eight or nine pupils from wriggling, twisting, and whispering. What chance had he with sixty-nine, especially when Bab and Polly had so much spare time on their hands?

On the second day of the new régime, Polly drew a caricature on the black board of Dick Harris suffering with a toothache. Near-sighted Mr. Peasley could not see it. When Polly was called upon to explain her geometry problem and gravely pointed out the various features of the cartoon as she proceeded the remaining sixty-eight were convulsed with laughter. Unsuspecting Mr. Peasley vainly rapped for order, and finally reprimanded some of the more mirthful for embarrassing Polly. The success of this first effort lead Polly to try other foolish and senseless tricks.

“Well, what trick are we going to pull off tomorrow?” the girls inquired one afternoon after school.

“I don’t know,” said Polly, “but I’ll try to think up something before basket ball is over.”

That Polly had succeeded was evident the next morning. Martha, leaning on a crutch, limped slowly down the aisle to her seat. Anastatia wore her right arm in a sling, and, not being ambidextrous, made fearful and wonderful work out of her geometry paper. Bab had each separate finger swathed in a neat, glaring white bandage. Blooming Peggy Leighton was powdered to a ghastly pallor with corn-starch and green chalk.

Large strips of black court plaster were crossed on Laura Daley’s flawless pink cheeks. Adelaide McAllister, the doctor’s daughter, wore a shade over one eye and reeked with the odor of iodine. Connie Reynolds carried a large bottle labeled “Pain Killer,” and every few minutes she would take out a teaspoon, sigh deeply, carefully measure out a dose and sadly gulp it down. Amy Gray's cheek bulged alarmingly because of the crabapple in her mouth. Lois Howard painted surprisingly life-like cuts and bruises on her classmates. Polly herself might have been the sole survivor of a particularly disastrous basket ball game. She had pasted black court plaster over two of her rather prominent front teeth, and one of her eyelids she had painfully glued down under a piece of flesh-colored court plaster. Both elbows were apparently out of joint, and her lump was even more prominent than Amy's.

When Mr. Peasley, at first mildly astonished, asked each apparently suffering young lady in turn if she had met with an accident, they murmured, “Basket ball last night.”

Altho the little science teacher was near-sighted and no disciplinarian, he was far from stupid. The crop was far too large to have grown in a single night. It did not seem possible even to unobserving Mr. Peasley that so many players could have been injured in a single well conducted basket ball game. A little later when a note was sent in to him from the adjoining room, his eyes began to twinkle behind his spectacles, quite as if he had stumbled upon some huge joke.

At half-past nine, very much to the horror of about thirty-five temporarily disfigured girls, two members of the school board, proudly escorting the district's representative to the state legislature, marched into the assembly room. Mr. Peasley, not dreaming that the visitors would take his little joke seriously, apologized humorously for the appearance of his pupils.

“You see,” he explained, without for a moment dreaming that he was sealing the fate of the basket ball team, “an unusually vigorous game of basket ball has left all of my young ladies a little the worse for wear.”

“It must be a fearfully brutal game,” commented the out-of-town visitor, looking over the surprised pupils, few of whom had been able to remove their carefully applied bandages. “I've never seen it played, but I have heard much of it, and this only confirms the reports that have reached me.”

“Yes,” agreed Mr. Simpson of the school board, “it's even worse than I dreamed it could be. From the looks of that Howard girl's face, I should say she was pounded black and blue from her head to her heels.”

“I notice,” said the distinguished visitor, “that several have bandages on their eyes. Any game that endangers the eyesight ought to be prohibited.”

“When Mr. Graham returns tomorrow,” promised Mr. Black, the second member of the board, “I shall tell him that no more games of basket ball will be tolerated in this school.”

This happened on Thursday. By Monday the girls had almost forgotten it, but remembrance returned very forcibly when just before lunch Mr. Graham announced, “No more basket ball.”

During the lunch hour, an excited group of girls clamored around Polly on the front steps.

“It's all your fault,” accused Martha, rather unjustly. “We'd never have thought of such foolishness if you hadn't suggested it.”

“Couldn't we explain to Mr. Graham?” Anastatia ventured doubtfully.

“Perhaps you'd like to undertake it,” offered Bab with mild sarcasm. “Mr. Graham is just the kind of man one likes to explain a thing like that to, now isn't he?”

“Yes,” agreed Connie, “I just see myself explaining that bottle of manufactured ‘Pain Killer.’”

“Me, too,” was the general chorus from the others.

A week passed with no change in the situation. The girls missed the game, but could do nothing to help themselves since an appeal to Mr. Graham seemed out of the question. Then an idea occurred to

Polly. “Why not take it to the board themselves?” Accordingly she found out that there was to be a meeting at four the next afternoon in Mr. Simpson’s office, a fenced in corner of his store.

Promptly at four Polly appeared at the appointed spot, but no one was there. For a minute she feared that she had made a mistake in the time, but a few minutes later the board appeared in a body.

Polly, very red in the face by this time, explained hurriedly but comprehensively, the entire affair. The elderly school board tried to maintain its dignity, and failed miserably. Polly finally left the members with mirthful tears standing in their eyes, for some fifty years previous they, too, had played jokes upon their teachers and gotten into “beaucoup de mixups.”

No promise of any kind had been made when Polly left the meeting but nevertheless she was hopeful. Nothing happened until two o’clock the following Monday afternoon, when Mr. Graham arose, his grave eyes fixed on Polly. The culprit grew red and white by turns as the principal cleared his throat and prepared to speak.

“Young ladies,” he announced. “all of you who consider it safe to play basket ball, may do so this afternoon after school in the usual place. The board withdraws its objections.”

 But yet from whispering we never refrain,
 So often we trot to Mr. Du Frain
 And he often administers pain.

Our History

When I count back it's more than a year
 Since I witnessed the Soph'mores jades and jeer.
 I, too, can remember the Senior's sigh,
 And her kind words, "Oh, dearie, don't cry."
 But now we are all Soph'mores bold
 What we do to the Freshmen we leave untold.
 I return the taunts that were given to me
 But in quite a different manner, you see.
 Now if we follow what the Juniors say
 We'll run our class downhill some day.
 Because we had as president a girl
 They accuse our brains of being a whirl.
 Still we have our members on all the teams
 And often win first place, it seems.
 Why should all shake their heads and sigh
 "Oh what a class," when we pass by.

We have our members on the staff of the "Owl,"
 Our name often appears in the "Howl";
 Our Girls' Basketball team the Seniors did play
 Although we didn't win, next year we may.
 In public speaking we have our place
 When it comes to prizes, we're in the race.
 In the Orchestra you can hear us play
 Every hour all through the day.
 When the band begins to play, we soon step out,
 We're always here and all about.
 The honor roll we too do reach,
 And once first place we did beseech.
 But now we'll stop and let our future come.
 Please remember, for I've said quite a sum,
 We're the class that's full of pep and fun
 For we're the "peppy" class of twenty-one.

Freshmen

The Lay of the Last Freshman

I

A vivid flash of lightning cut the darkness of the night,
And made bright the swaying landscape in a sudden blaze of light.
The wind roared 'round the housetops, rattling every window-pane,
And writhed the darkened pine trees till they shrieked with mortal pain.

II

Inside a tiny cabin built upon a lonely hill,
A Freshman sat with bended back and labored with a will.
Before him was a paper, black with figures strange and new,
He was struggling with an nx^2 less y plus fifty-two.

III

And the wind that moaned and shrieked outside to him seemed to say,
"Never mind, dear Freshman, you will be a Soph some day."
Heeding not the thunder crash nor the wind that roared and blew,
He turned again to nx^2 less y plus fifty-two.

IV

With hours more of figuring his heah fell on the desk,
But he roused himself once more and continued with his task.
Then midnight came and still he sat and heard the raindrops say,
"Never mind, dear Freshman, you will be a Soph some day."

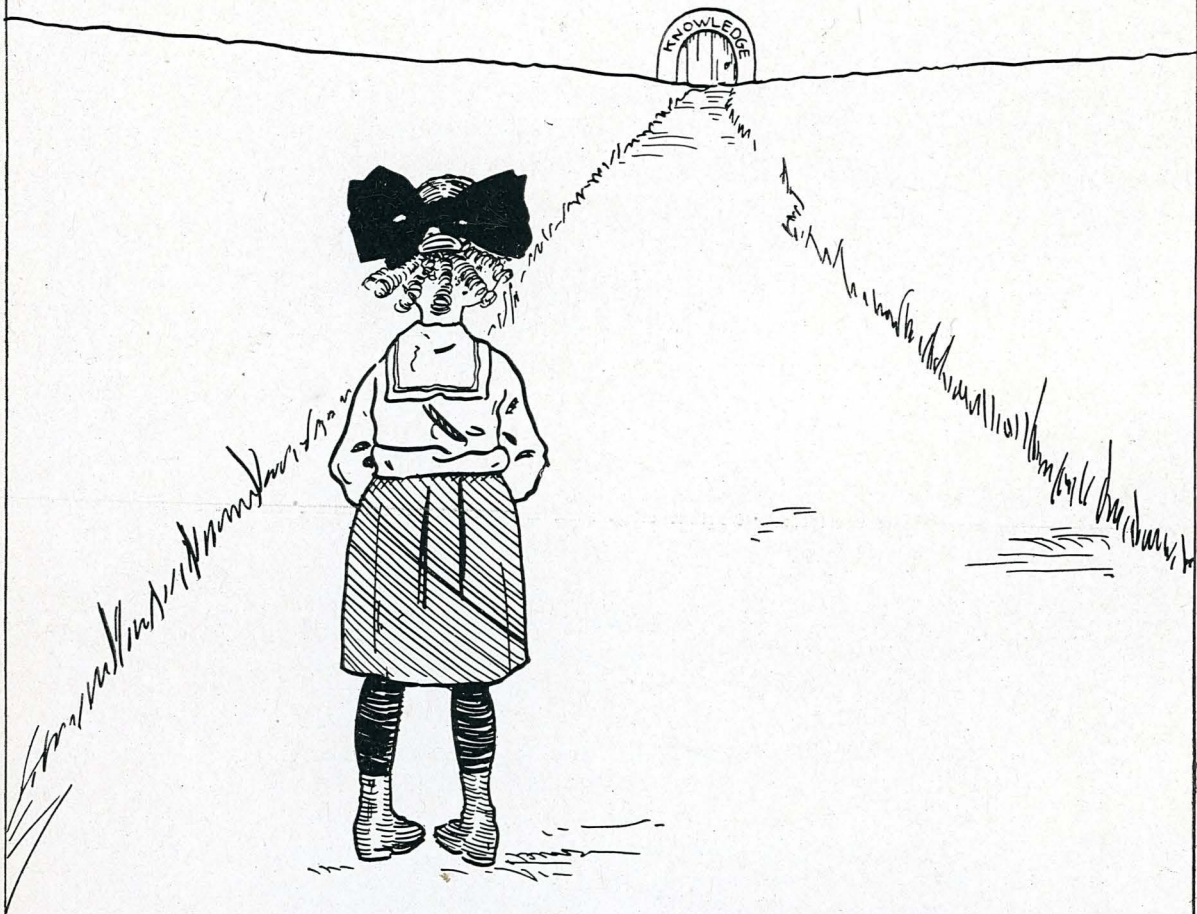

V

But alas, alack! the lightning struck the cabin to the ground,
And the earth was swallowed up in a terrible roar of sound;
But above the din of thunder, you could still hear something say,
"Never mind, dear Freshman, you will be a Soph some day."

L'ENVOI

When dawn lit up the eastern sky and made it brilliant blue,
He struggled still with nx^2 less y plus fifty-two,
And the sunbeams creeping through the trees smiled and seemed to say,
"Never mind, dear Freshman, you will be a Soph some day."

FRESHMEN

WITH HOPES

Freshman Class History

OVER the top, way over—that is the proud record of the Freshmen in everything they have undertaken.

In the first place, the class of '22 is one of the largest classes that ever entered old R. H. S. Three hundred and twenty pupils enrolled in September, and in February the number was swelled by the addition of two hundred and ten new recruits, making a total of five hundred and thirty. Some class, we'll say.

The first activity in which the Freshmen participated was the selling of bonds for the Fourth Liberty Loan. They made a splendid showing in this as well as in the Thrift Stamp drives. At Christmas time, Room 2 raised more than enough money to support a French war orphan, and Room 200 did likewise.

There has always been a good sprinkling of freshmen at the football and basket ball games, ready to do their share of the rooting. In every organization in school you will find eager members of the class willing to do their share, and striving to prepare themselves for the time when the reigns of power shall be turned over into their hands.

A number of freshmen have gone out for athletics, and their work has certainly added to the luster of the class banner. Among the most notable examples is Baker, who made the heavyweight basket ball squad as a regular, and helped the team to win district and state honors.

Besides these activities, the Freshmen have interested themselves heartily in the real work of the school, as is plainly evidenced by the quarterly Honor Rolls. Other classes may neglect their work for the sake of outside activities, but '22 is proud to boast that they are capable of doing both. At the time of going to press, a large number of the class were centering their interest in the reading and extemporaneous speaking contests, and we know that they will do credit to their classmates.

Despite the jeers of the Sophomores, the indifference of the Juniors, and the condescension of the Seniors, the Class of '22 has "carried on," and will ever continue to do so.

Girls

BY MARGARET BODORFF

Girls with hair of deepest hue,
 Girls with eyes of gray and blue,
 Girls with beauty in their face,
 Girls with every charm and grace,
 Girls with dimples, smiles so sweet,
 Girls who dance with nimble feet,
 Girls in sizes short and tall,
 In our class you will find them all.

A Few Reverted Proverbs for Freshmen

- I. An admit in time saves an embarrassing moment at the office.
- II. As ye sew so shall ye rip [Sewing I].
- III. When teacher's away the Freshies will rough house.
- IV. Absence from school makes the heart grow fonder—also the work pile up.
- V. Distance lends enchantment to Eighth Hour. [Ask F. Dupee.]
- VI. Laugh in one's sleeve—the direct route to the funny bone.
- VII. Never do today what you can put off until tomorrow.

Litany of a Freshman

Oh, when you are late,
 It is always your fate
 To sit in Room 2 that night;
 And if you're not good
 And behave as you should,
 The teachers are sure to bite.

Athletics

The Heavyweight Season

LAST year being such an unusual one everywhere is a good explanation for Rockford's unusual football season. From one standpoint, the football season of 1918 was the most unsuccessful of any in the history of the school. It is true that financially the season was a miserable failure; but should we judge a season by the amount of the gate receipts? If this is the case then the spirit and sportmanship of athletics in Rockford are decidedly lowered, and the team may be considered very poor.

The influenza epidemic hit us in the middle of the season, thereby affecting both ends, namely, the number of games played, and the gate receipts. With practically a green squad of men, it was difficult at first to see where Mr. Winters could get a team that would creditably represent Rockford and uphold the record of previous years. Mr. Winters did the impossible, and rounded into shape a team that can be called "good" if not of championship calibre.

Practice games with Chicago schools could not be arranged, so the first contest was to be played with Joliet. The day before the Joliet game, the City Health Department called the game off. The reason was that no public gatherings would be allowed during the epidemic. Joliet is very grateful to the Rockford Health Department, as it saved them the embarrassment of returning home with the small end of the score.

From that time on we were kept in hot water, always expecting that the following week the ban would be lifted and play could begin. But no such good luck. Credit should be given the men for the faithfulness they showed in practicing during the vacation. If you think that it is fun to practice week after week, and then on Thursday or Friday have it definitely announced that no game would be played, just come out and try it.

The team was so anxious to get started that when they met Beloit for the first real game of the season, Rockford romped away with them. The score was 62 to 0. The second game with Freeport was a great success, and we had revenge for the 40 to 14 defeat they handed us two years ago on the same field. The final score was 55 to 0. As usual, Rockford shone that night. LaGrange was our next victim. They were coached by a former Rockford High School star, but we couldn't consider that, and sent them home, 46 to 0.

F. J. WINTERS, Coach.

Then came the near fatal game with Elgin on Thanksgiving day. It rained the night before and snowed all Thanksgiving morning. The field was one big swamp of mud, water, and slush. Good football was out of the question, as it was impossible to keep from slipping. The players on both teams became so soaked and chilled that neither team could do itself justice. Many of the men were playing their last game for Rockford. They all fought hard and it was no fault of theirs that the game ended a scoreless tie. They feel that they could have taken Elgin's measure, had the game been played on a dry field.

During the season Rockford scored 163 points to their opponents 0. In other words, for the first time in its history, Rockford went through the season without being scored upon. After all, from the viewpoint of the fans it was not such a bad season. It was short, but what there was of it was good.

The Lightweight Season

E. U. McDONALD
Coach

WITH the departure of Mr. Beyer, the lightweights were coached by a new member of the faculty. Mr. McDonald hails from Decatur, and his first year with the team shows that he knows the fine points of the game. With many of last year's squad back and a few new additions, the minors started off in whirlwind fashion.

The first game of the season was with Crane Technical of Chicago. As usual, the minors outclassed their old rivals. The score was 47 to 0. In the next game with Lane Technical they had a great misfortune. Rockford really won the game, 6 to 0, but just as the play started that carried the ball over the goal line, the referee accidently blew his whistle. This "boner" on the official's part robbed the lightweights of the game. The rule that declares the ball dead as soon as the referee's whistle blows had to be enforced. The ball was called back and the half ended before they could put it over again. Rockford did not have an opportunity to score the second time, and the game ended a scoreless tie.

At Freeport they romped away from their opponents, 33 to 0. Freeport missed Francis who scored Freeport's lone touchdown last year, but even the mighty Francis could not have broken thru Rockford's defence.

A game was scheduled with the East Aurora lights as a curtain raiser to the game with LaGrange, but the train on which the team was traveling was wrecked just outside of Aurora, and the men were unable to get here. The minors played a game with some "pickups."

Thanksgiving day was a great success. Even in their soaked and chilled condition they so far outclassed the Elgin minors that they gave up the struggle before the end of the third quarter. The Elgin players realized that they were up against a better team, and it was useless to finish it. When the game stopped the score was 47 to 0, and would have been well over the sixty mark had the game been finished.

The Lightweights went through the season without being scored upon, which greatly adds to this year's record.

Review of the Season

THE Basketball season of 1918-1919 was the most successful of any in the history of the school. Englund and his team mates more than upheld their places in the world this year. Their playing was of such class that the team was supported more than usual this year, and as a result the receipts of the games were sufficient to pay the large bill for football equipment and to enable the Athletic Association to breathe easy with its head above water.

At the beginning of the season, Mr. Winters had only three players who were good enough for regular positions, but three men don't make a team nowadays. Fans wondered where Mr. Winters could get a team out of the squad that turned out, and came to the conclusion that he would make $3 + \frac{1}{2} + \frac{1}{2} = 5$. He did, but he multiplied the forwards by 2 and obtained $3 + 1 + 1 = 5$. Substituting in the above equation you obtain, (Captain Harry Englund, Hugh Powell, Joel Carlson) + Rex Enright + Ralph Baker = SOME TEAM.

Enright and Baker were developed practically this year. Enright was a member of last year's lightweight squad. Baker was a freshman this year with some grade school experience. These men improved steadily throughout the year, and before the end of the season they were picked on many all-star teams.

Gee played a forward position at the beginning of the season, but because of the eight semester rule, he had to give way to a man who would remain all season.

Rockford played a total of twenty-four games, losing but one of these by the small margin of six points to Belvidere. We are not trying to make excuses, but to show you how lucky Belvidere was that night, Rockford defeated them on their own floor the following week by the score of 45 to 26.

In her twenty-four games, Rockford scored a total of 1054 points to her opponents 405 points. The average Rockford score per game was 43 and her opponents was 16. This is the best record ever made by a Rockford High School Basketball Team.

Review of the Season—Continued

In the Northern Illinois High School Conference, Rockford so outclassed all the other teams that, for the second consecutive year, we ran away with both the Conference and District championships. In the conference, the only team which pushed the boys to the limit was West Aurora, who relied too much on "rough stuff." Their method failed, however, and we won, 26 to 21. The other games, barring the finals in the tournament, were rather one-sided affairs. At no time was the team in danger. It was some team, and a great year for the school.

Little was heard about the members of the second team, but really it is the second team that builds up the first team. In the tournaments, a first team would be of little value without a second team, for it is the second team who carries the games through so that the first string will be in shape for the harder ones. So here's a tribute to the second team.

Captain Englund, Powell, Carlson, and Shoudy will be lost by graduation. These men will all be missed, particularly the all-state men, "Skin," "Hap," and "Joe." It will be a long time before Rockford has another such a fighting captain as Harry Englund.

The other members who had not played the required time to win their "R's," but who deserve credit for their services on the squad are: Philip Behr, Harold Williams, Robert Boehland, William Garrett, Harold Burr, Roy Jones, Raymond Fridley, and John Meshkoff. The last three were freshmen this year.

Our State Champs

Captain Harry Englund is, perhaps, the best basketball player ever developed in Rockford High School. He is a leader and a fighter, and greatly responsible for the team's showing this year. As a floor man, he is without an equal; as a leader all he had to say was, "Follow me and fight," and they followed him and fought their way to the Conference, District and State championships. As a reward for his unceasing energy, he was awarded the center position on the all-state team. Never have any set of men had a finer man to work under, and "Skin" will be missed by the entire school next year.

Hugh Powell is another all-state man, and considered by many critics as the best guard ever turned out by this school. "Hap's" calibre can easily be seen when it is learned that the only way an opposing forward can get a basket from him is by throwing it from the other half of the floor. Hap's favorite stunt is to talk his opponent out of making his baskets by telling him that he can't make them. The classy way that "Hap" broke up dribbles has never been seen on the Illinois University floor before. For his splendid work at Champaign, as well as all during the season, Hap was given the captaincy of the all-state team, as well as being named as one of the two all-state guards.

Joel Carlson, holding down the other job at guard, is another all-state man. Joe's work at the State tourney easily won for him this position. His work so far outclassed any shown by the guards of other schools that there was no doubt about this matter in the minds of the officials. This is Joe's second year on the team. Like Powell, Joe's opponent seldom made many baskets from his side of the center ring. By the time that his opponent had reached his territory and was making ready to shoot the ball, he no longer had the ball—Joe had it. It will be a long time before Rockford will have as earnest and plucky a guard as Joe Carlson.

Rex Enright, picked by many on their all star teams, is the cleverest standing forward in the conference. Opposing teams always put their best guard for a standing guard, and as a result Rex always had a man riding him. Rex had to shake him now and then, however, just to make him feel cheap and give himself a chance to drop a few in. To be in the right place, at the right time, all the time is a man-sized job, but Rex was there with bells. Rex is one man that will be here next year, and if the rest of the team can equal Rex, Rockford can expect big things from them.

Ralph Baker, the clever freshman, entered from Garrison school and at once became the idol of many fans (Girls included). Baker has become one of the best forwards in the state. He has a deadly eye for the basket, and can make his shots from any place on the floor. His long distance shots make the fans beam in admiration, for they sure are good. We are glad that Baker is only a freshman, for he has a long time ahead of him, and he ought to become one of the finest men in the country. He is already known over the state as "Rockford's Freshman Wonder."

Sodergren, taken over from the lightweight squad to play in the tournaments, greatly aided in winning both the district and the state honors. He earned his place by hard work and fully deserved all the honor given him. He surprised the fans at the tournaments by playing a game worthy of his big brothers. In the final game of the district tourney with Belvidere, he made many baskets during the half he played and held back the mighty Silvius and Shultz. In the Springfield game he was put against the giant Poscover, and sure worried him. "Sody" is eligible until February, 1920.

Daley, better known as "Jim," is a good utility man. He plays a forward or guard position with equal skill and was a valuable man in the tournaments for this reason, for he could easily be substituted in any position. Jim is a sticker, and his opponents seldom were able to find the basket, when he was at guard. Jim will be a great aid to the team next year.

Edwin Anderson, better known to all of us as "Zula," is always on deck when a man is needed. He played splendid ball in the tournament, and if he continues doing the work he has done this year, he will no doubt find a regular place on the team. His man seldom made enough baskets to brag about when "Zula" made up his mind to make him stay on his own side of the floor.

Nevin Gage, a former guard on the Austin High School team of Chicago, earned his place on the tournament squad as a forward. His eye for the basket was a great detriment to the opponents, for he was clever at picking the ball out of the air and calmly dropping it into the iron circle. Gage will only be eligible for the first semester of next year, but he will be a valuable man to the team as long as he can play.

Next in line to Englund as a center is Shoudy. He is one of the best jumpers on the squad, and this, together with his height, makes him a splendid center. His basket shooting during the tournament made the fans sit up and take notice. Shoudy will not be with the team next year, for he graduates with the rest of the seniors on the squad.

The District Tournament

THE Northern District Basketball Tournament was a great success. The result could not have been better from a Rockford standpoint. It was handled with excellent skill by the officials, and the management, under the supervision of Mr. Shafer, was without fault. The receipts were $2,250, which is the most ever taken in at a district tournament in Illinois.

Twenty teams representing the towns in the northern part of the state competed to see which one would represent this district in the State tourney.

Rockford was the goat in the drawings, having five games to play in order to get to the finals. On the other hand, our rival, Belvidere, had only three games to take her to the finals.

On Thursday evening, Rockford met the Mt. Carroll team. It was a good workout for the team, but it held little excitement. The score 89 to 7 tells the whole story. Friday afternoon Rockford met Morrison. The second team was used during all the game, but at that Morrison was vanquished with a score of 56 to 5. Saturday morning, Pecatonica bowed to us in defeat. The seconds were also used in this game, and the score was 51 to 12.

Then came the big game with Freeport. It was a gruelling contest and Rockford had to fight for every point that was put on the score board. Captain Englund was the bright star during this game. Enright had a jinx following him most of the time, but he shook him off long enough to drop in a few baskets, and kept the Freeport guards busy most of the time. Baker was guarded by their stellar man, Voigt, and had a hard time getting the ball near his basket. Carlson and Powell were towers of strength on defense, and stopped many a good play of Freeport's.

The final game with Belvidere goes down in history as the best and most exciting game ever played at Rockford. It was a terrible game from the viewpoint of the fan who sat in agony during that long forty minutes.

Rockford led at the half 15 to 6. Sodergren, playing the best game of his career to that date, kept the mighty Silvius and Shultz from scoring from the middle of the floor. At the end of the third quarter, all the confidence that the Rockford fans had felt at the end of the half was gone, for Belvidere had picked up during the third quarter and was giving the team a mighty fast run. The final quarter began and before we could realize what had happened, the score was 34 to 34. Then something happened, and it happened so quickly that Belvidere didn't have time to realize what it was until it was over. Englund, with but one minute left to play, dribbled the ball under the basket for a counter, and followed it up with another just like it just as the gun sounded. The final score was 38 to 34.

It was not the stellar work of any one individual player, but just the fight and "never say die" spirit of the whole team working together that carried them through.

The State Tournament

We went. We saw. We conquered.

AFTER winning the district tournament, we journeyed to Champaign to compete for state honors. Many fans were in doubt as to whether or not we could bring home the bacon. Mr. Winters believed that it would be possible if we could leave home the jinx which has followed Rockford to the two preceding state tourneys. The team, encouraged by a wonderful send-off, and by a few lucky students who were able to follow, played a brand of basketball that was unequalled.

The first game against Flora was comparatively easy after Rockford once was started, and the points rolled in one after the other. Although on a strange floor, the boys soon got used to the large floor space and the glass back boards, and before long were playing as though they were not strangers to the floor. They found the basket enough times to make the score 31 to 10.

The second game was with Dundee. Rockford, not playing to form or trying to pile up a score, won easily 37 to 10. Substitutions were made in the last half to save the men for the harder games which were to come later.

The Herrin team, without the services of a coach, came very near putting a crimp in Rockford's hopes. Their passing of the ball was the best seen on the floor and if they had been able to follow this work up by a few baskets, they would probably have won. On the other hand, Rockford played the poorest game she had played during the entire tournament. "Skin" was not well, and Rex had the jinx at his heels. The score was 19 to 14. This game was worse than the one with Belvidere from the viewpoint of the spectators.

The final game was not as thrilling as had been expected, for Rockford completely outclassed Springfield. In this game, Rockford found its old form and gave out all that she had missed in the other games. Springfield's wonderful five men defense, which had baffled every other team they played, crumbled before the fast offensive of Rockford. Rex was on at the basket and Sody made a fool of the giant Poscover. "Skin," "Hap," and Joe, playing their last game of basketball for the Red and Black, never played a cleaner and a faster game in their lives. These three men were given their deserved positions on the all-state team, and "Hap" was honored with the captaincy for his steady work during the entire tournament. Poscover of Springfield, and Haussler of Peoria were the other men who were honored, receiving the forward positions. The final score of the final game was 39 to 20.

The seventy students from Rockford who are attending the University and the students who went down with the team did nobly in their cheering. "Ted" Needham was right there when it came time for a good cheer, and before the game was over, Ted had the majority of the spectators following him in his yells for Rockford.

Lightweight Basketball

ROCKFORD was very fortunate this year in having such an unusually good lightweight team. All of the regulars were on the team last year, and the first part of the season we had the classiest team in the conference. However, misfortune could not be kept away. Brolin, the star center, was lost to the team at mid season because of the eight semester rule. McCausland was out of two games while undergoing repairs, and Anderson was missing in action at one of the crucial games. These factors were responsible to a large extent for our defeat at the hands of Elgin, Belvidere, and Freeport.

The lightweights had for a leader a man who is a fighter as well as a leader. "Freddie" Burns, playing at guard, was perhaps one of the best men in this position in the lightweight division. He had the knack of picking the man who was going to try a field goal, and there were few baskets made from his corner.

Edward Brolin held down the center position with ease until declared ineligible the first of February. He had a habit of getting into a corner and then dropping the ball into the basket from any angle. At times he completely bewildered his opponents and succeeded in making basket after basket.

Leslie Sodergren, better known as "Sody," is as clever a forward as any in the conference, his greatest toll in one game being seventeen baskets. He is speedy on the floor, elusive in the grasp of an opponent, and has a keen eye for the basket. His fine showing during the season led Coach Winters to pick him for the district tournament, and later on for the state meet. We do not need to comment here as to his work in those events, for it is a well-known story.

George McCausland was another stellar light in the Rockford combination. He played the other guard with Captain Burns. He was a great factor in all the games in which he played.

Everett Anderson played a forward position. With the passing of Brolin, he was given a chance to show what he could do in the center ring, and was found to be good enough to fill that place for the remainder of the season.

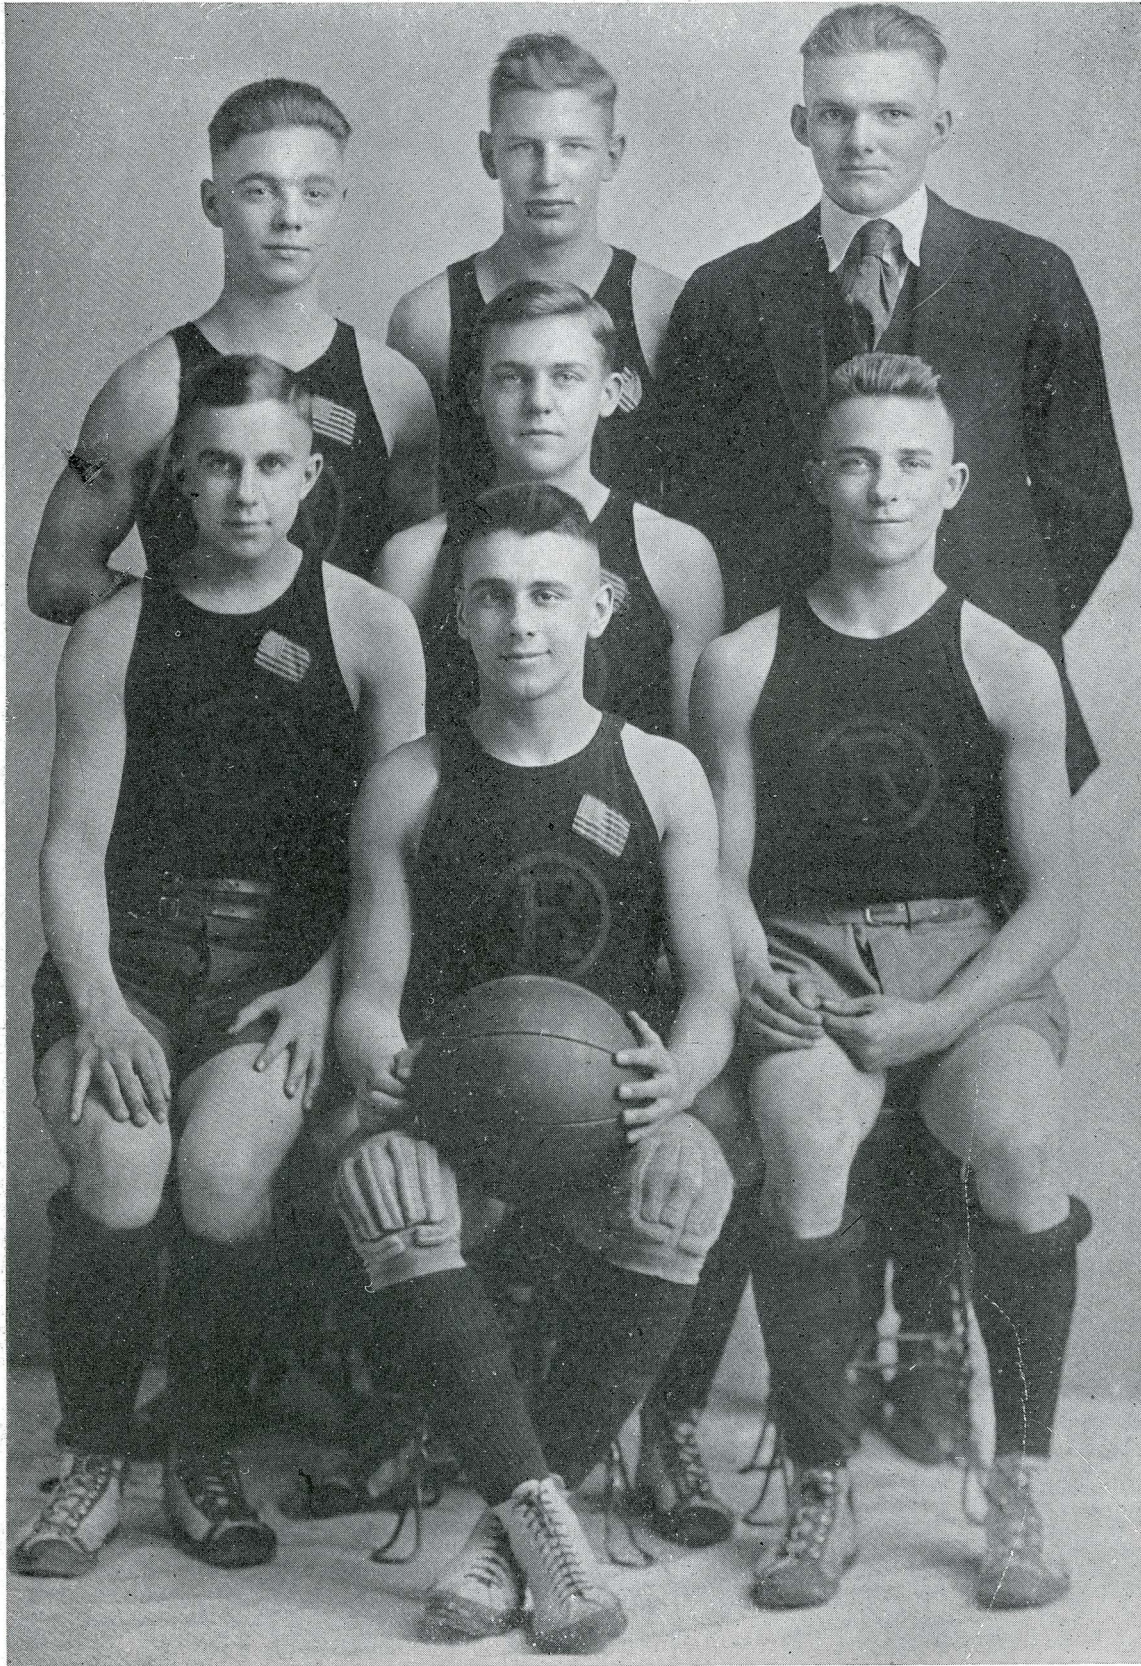

Last, but far from the least of the "R" men, is Kenneth Walden. "Kenny" was the running mate to Anderson. He was a sure shot, and when he had the ball the scorekeeper usually had to put up two more points for Rockford. "Kenny" has another year ahead of him, and should be very valuable to athletics next year.

There were a number of men who played well, although they did not play the required length of time to be entitled to their "R's." These men are: Joe Swanson, Hugh Dales, Harry Carlson, Carl Satre, Lloyd Worden, Earl Ballentine, and Edward Pelgen. They showed their class when given a chance; and should find regular places next year.

Alumni Reminiscences

WILTON FLOBERG

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot——"

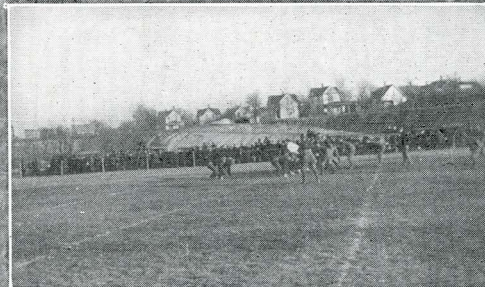

Rockford high school's thousands of graduates are not of that mind. Well they remember the day they were presented their diplomas, escorted to the door of life, and then given the parting blessing "Goodbye, Good Luck, God Bless You." With few exceptions they have made good. Representing all ages, all states, all talents, and all occupations they are true representatives of what is produced by the faculty of Rockford high school, upright citizens, fearless and law abiding. Education isn't everything. In fact it was nothing but for the application which was shown by the alumni. That is one of the reasons that the alumni has made good. Another reason is that they are fighters. It's uncanny, that Rockford high school spirit, learned in the study halls, recreated on the athletic fields, it is a power that seldom if ever fails. That is why you see grey-haired ladies and gentlemen, members of the class of 18—, jumping up in their seats at a basketball game when the "Rabs" drop in a basket.

Death has taken a great toll in the ranks of the recent graduates, men who heard and answered the call of America and paid the supreme sacrifice for your sake and my sake. There were no slackers in this great family. Whether wearing a colonel's eagle or a corporal's stripe, they were there.

And yet there are many sad instances. Supposing an alumnus, one of the most popular members of the class of '10, for instance, came walking along the hall. Strangers, strangers everywhere, and not a hand to shake. It's pathetic. You climb the stairs where once a janitor chased you for intruding upon a study hour. Why you'd almost give a thrift stamp or so just for the privilege of being scolded by a patient professor and sent to the principal's office to await the dignitary's decision. You get to feel that way.

Some of us have children. Don't you envy them their joy on the opening day of school and the greater joy on the closing day? When they are late for supper, how can you refuse forgiveness when they tell you it was a botany hike, or gym. party or senior prom? You may live to be as old as Methuselah, but you cannot forget those golden days at school.

The alumni of Rockford high school is yet alive, more than ever before. It is watching the progress of the present day students, hoping to find them worthy. Through newspaper columns, by word of mouth or deed, it allows the school news and activities to float in from out the world of bustle and business. Medals are common these days. But diplomas, giving the name of the bearer as an alumnus of Rockford high school loom up a great deal bigger in the minds of the holders than does the distinguished service cross given to a hero by a monarch for bravery. This is a distinguished service cross given in token of your own worthiness. It speaks your worth to the world and attaches you to a certain school, which like a certain circus, is "The greatest on earth."

ON THE FIELD

ATHLETIC FIELD—THE GIFT OF THE ALUMNI

Agriculture Club

THE years of 1918 and 1919 have been the most successful ones in the history of the "Ag" club. The club has shown great progress in the past year, and a great deal of credit is due Mr. R. T. Glassco who has supervised the club for the past two years. Under him the club has grown until it has approximately fifty members on the present records. This is an increase of one hundred per cent over the membership of last year.

Several interesting meetings have been held, and prominent men of the city gave talks on farm machinery and other subjects pertaining to agriculture. Wing Agnew gave a talk at one of the meetings on the farming that is being carried on "over there," and told a great many of his interesting experiences overseas.

The first social event was a picnic held at the Engstrom farm on the river road. Wienies were roasted and marshmallows were toasted over a hot fire. Every one had a wonderful time and the outing was pronounced by all as a great success.

In December the "Ags" went to Chicago to the International Stock Show. They went on Friday and returned the following Sunday. They visited some of the packing houses and saw many other places of interest while there.

The next event was a sleigh ride party. When everyone was cold enough to stop riding, an oyster stew was given at the Forsaith farm. After this, games finished the evening.

On April 11, the third annual banquet was held at the Forsaith farm. Some of the former members were invited and they all said that it was the best banquet that the club had ever given. After dinner a very interesting program was furnished by members of the club.

If the club continues to show the interest that it has shown this year, great things may be expected from this organization next year.

"Say, Alice, do you belong to the Biology Club?"

"I should say I do belong, and am right proud of it. Why?"

"Oh, I just wondered. Who belongs?"

"Sixty-six people who are taking Botany or Zoology, or have taken it. The club is growing all the time, too."

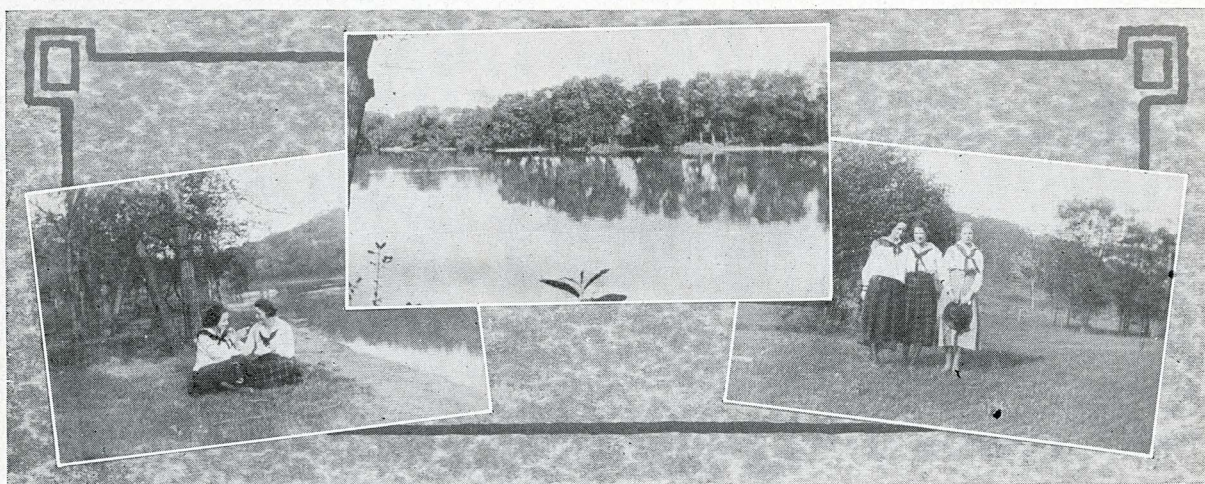

"When do you meet and what do you do?"

"Well, we plan to meet every other Wednesday afternoon and when the weather is favorable we take a hike to some suitable place. When the weather is stormy, we have a short indoor meeting. The second meeting of this season was held in the Girls' Gym, and was in the nature of a party, and we certainly enjoyed ourselves immensely."

"Who are your officers?"

"Mary Goddard is the president; Walter Block, vice-president; Robert Porter, secretary; and Jane Bement, treasurer, this season, preceding the standing officers."

"My, the Biology Club ought to grow with such fine officers. Guess I'll join."

Girls' Athletic Club

IN the fall, 1918, it was uncertain who would be the G. A. C. advisor. It seemed that no one could take the place of Miss Hill, the founder of the society, and the beloved friend of all the girls. However, Miss Hiserodt, the new gymnasium teacher consented to lead them, and went to work with much of Miss Hill's old pep to bring G. A. C. to the front again this year.

Margaret Henry was again made president, with Gertrude Collins, Elva Olander, and Elizabeth Stuckey as her staff. These girls have helped to boom G. A. C. and make her one of the foremost organizations of the school. In March, new qualifications were made out, which enables the girls to join the society with fewer preliminaries than before. Therefore in early April, many girls went through clownish antics in order to become full-fledged members of the G. A. C.

The club has had many hikes in the fall and in the spring, and at all of these the girls of the school were always welcome guests. It is needless to say that a large number of girls hiked and that these good times were always well attended.

Margaret Henry was chosen head of basketball, Harriet Daggett of baseball, Elizabeth Stuckey of track, Gladys Thompson of tennis, Gertrude Collins of hiking, and Marguerite Hassell of swimming. Any girl of the school may participate in these sports which give her points according to the honors she receives. The points system has just been established in the club this year, but it has proved a great success.

During the year, Martha Coleman gave us a very interesting talk on the Philippine Islands, and at another time Wing Agnew told us of his experiences across the sea in the great war. There were always very peppy programs at each meeting.

On March twenty-ninth, a dance was sponsored by the G. A. C. This was the big event of the year for the society, and outside guests were invited. It was held in the Boys' Gym, which was decorated in the club colors, red and white. There was a splendid attendance and everyone was indebted to this society for a very pleasant evening.

Although the organization loses many of her members by graduation, the other girls will continue the splendid work of the girls who are leaving, and it is to be expected that the G. A. C. will add more laurels during the coming year.

The Student Council

THE student council is divided into two sections, the Boys' Student Council and the Girls' Student Council. Each body is elected by the school, so they are clearly the representatives of the student body.

These groups furnish a voice by which the students of the entire school can express their opinions to the faculty and vice versa.

The work of these organizations is for the betterment of the school in general. During the meetings they discuss various matters around school that need improvement, and try to suggest ways to secure such improvement. Two members from each group are selected for each of the general school parties, and, headed by one of the faculty, have charge of the entire affair.

Each section is headed by one of the faculty. Just now those advisors are Miss Putnam, heading the girls' group, and Mr. Du Frain at the head of the boys' group. In the few years in which these organizations have lived, this being the fourth, they have done splendid work. But owing to the influenza epidemic, their reorganization was not affected until late in the semester. Nevertheless, they have been able to accomplish a great many important things which needed attention, such as presenting the locker question in the assemblies assisted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

At the first meeting of the girls' council they elected Marjorie Salisbury as president, and Harriet Daggett as secretary. The boys also elected officers. Their president is Richard Mott, vice-president, Jack Page, and their secretary is Theodore Camlin.

These councils are a step toward student government, and should receive the loyal support of every student in the school. These organizations belong to you and you must give them your co-operation.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce

THE Junior Chamber of Commerce of Rockford High School is an entirely new organization to the school. Mr. Burroughs, the head of our oratory department, brought the idea here when he came last fall, and it appealed to Principal Briggs very much. A meeting of all the boys interested in such a project was held, and talks were given by various well-known members of the faculty. Mr. John H. Camlin, president of the Senior Chamber of Commerce, also spoke to the boys, encouraging them and giving them some valuable hints.

Fewer boys showed up at the next meeting, but the election of officers was held just the same, and those who were present were very enthusiastic. The club now has twenty-nine members, every one a live wire, and is growing rapidly.

This organization is fundamentally democratic. Its purpose is to give boys a training in co-operation and the management of public affairs which will be invaluable to them in future life. But in addition to all this, it is a club of boosters, continually endeavoring to better conditions around the school and around town.

Are they accomplishing these ends? Judge for yourself.

The football season, as you know, was a financial failure on account of the "flu." Things looked pretty bad for the Thanksgiving game unless more tickets could be sold. Mr. Hunter told this to the J. C. C. which had just been organized. Could they help? They sure could and did, and financially saved the day.

Then the band concert came along. Mr. Haight asked for help, and it was willingly given. The club sold tickets, boosted, and carried on a newspaper publicity campaign for the coming event. It did its work, and did it well.

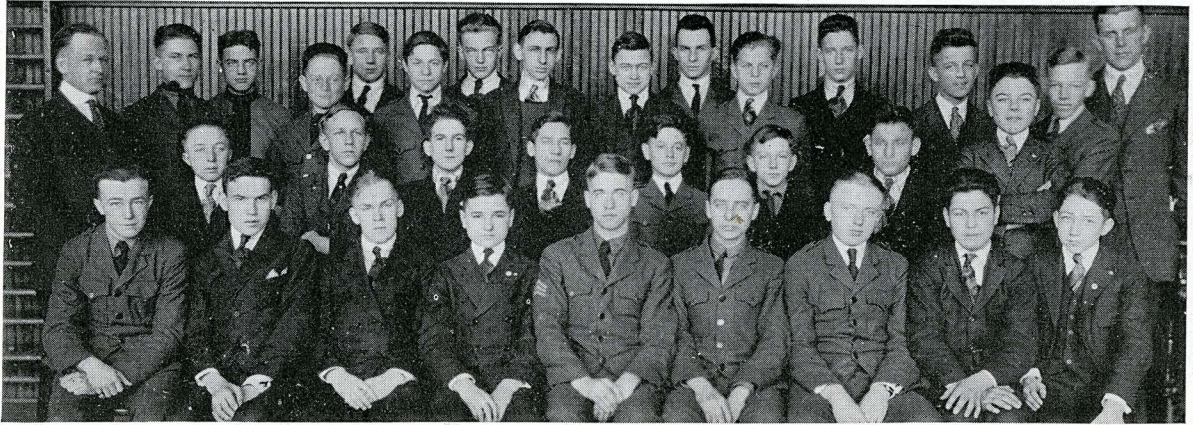

When the tournament came, the need for a printed form of yells and songs was felt. The J. C. C. was right on the job again, and had pamphlets printed and distributed containing the school's favorites. The club helped entertain visiting teams who were Rockford's guests during the tourney.

Many little things have been done about the school building. Washrooms were cleaned up, soap provided, and so on. The club offered a handsome silver cup for public discussion, and erected a beautiful memorial to those who have left R. H. S. to serve their country.

On Tuesday evening, February 11, the members were invited to the monthly banquet of the Senior Chamber of Commerce. There was an excellent program, and the boys got a chance to see how the senior organization worked. Jack Page, the president of the J. C. C., presented for the club a beautiful gavel to the S. C. C. President Camlin accepted it with words of commendation and encouragement to the donors.

Now the members of this club are not mollicoddles. They are not human wonders either, as you will see by looking over the membership list. They cannot do everything, but they can do much more if you will join them. Every wide awake boy in the school is wanted. There are no elections of members. The organization is democratic. Come on.

Philomathean Literary Society

THE Philomathean Literary Society has long been recognized as one of the leading and important organizations of this institution, but last fall it looked as tho the society was defunct. The "flu" epidemic in the fall made it hard for all organizations to resume their work. At all events, the situation together with the difficulty of breaking the long established custom of evening meetings and holding the sessions in the afternoon, caused the abandonment for the time being of all plans for reorganizing.

Early in the new year, however, when school life had once more settled down to its accustomed normal pace, plans to revive the society were at once put into operation. Graduation had taken a number of last year's members, and conflicting interests made it impossible for others to attend. Despite this discouragement, fifteen of the old "stand-bys" got together one Wednesday afternoon in January, and the reorganization was promptly completed.

Most of the time and attention of the society this year has been given to the problem of getting the society on its feet so that it would be in a condition to make a prosperous start next fall. To this end, some excellent programs have been worked out which are calculated to give the members the confidence and ability to run a literary society along the right kind of lines.

A lively campaign for new members was started early in the second semester, and the results were highly satisfactory. The new men all give promise of developing in a manner calculated to meet the highest demands of the society. As there are but few seniors among this year's membership, the prospects are bright for another year.

Before the present school year is over, the Philos are planning on having several debates, extemporaneous speaking contests, and public discussions. A debate with the rival Delphic society is being seriously considered, and this meet should arouse the utmost interest and enthusiasm among the members of both groups.

The Delphic Literary Society

BENJ. HANNA,
Faculty Critic

THE Delphic Literary Society became one of the progressive organizations of Rockford High School in 1916. It was formed for the purpose of stimulating interest in oratory and debate in the school, and to give its members knowledge of parliamentary usage to such a degree that in later years they may become active, intelligent members of business, social, political, or municipal organizations. The critic at this time was Mr. Claude Hanna, to whom much credit is due for keeping the society alive and making it a factor in school life.

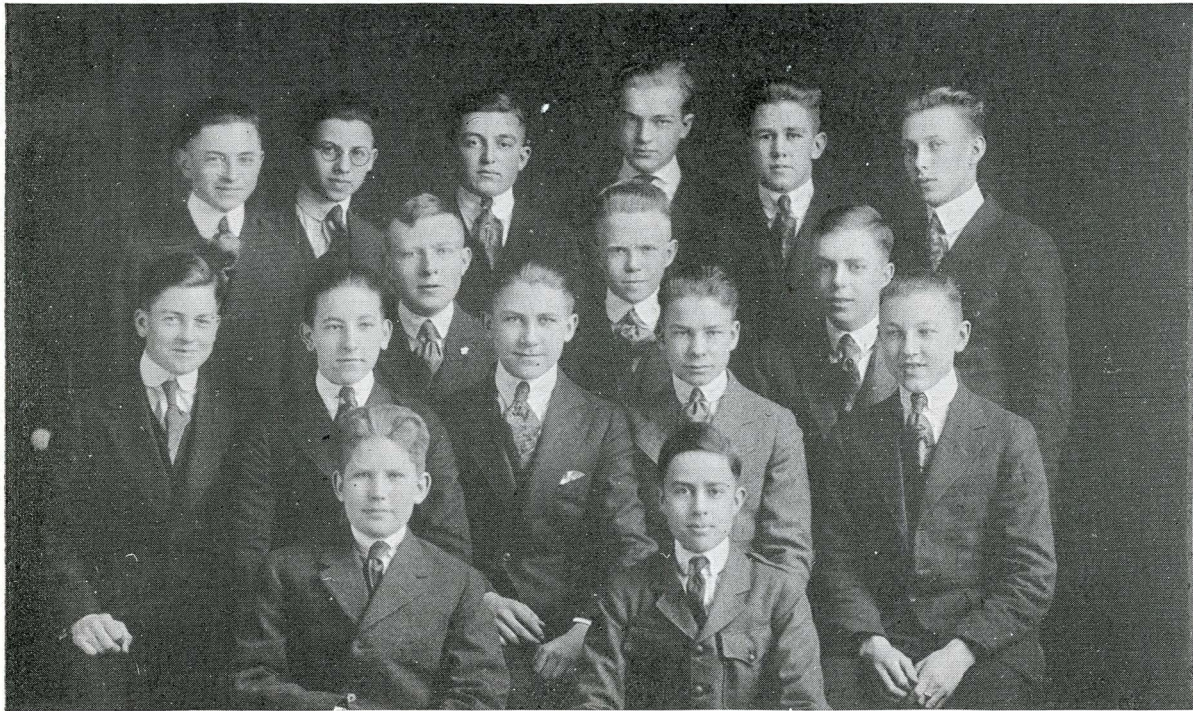

During the first semester of the present year, the meetings of the society were discontinued for patriotic reasons, such as the saving of light and fuel. Now, however, it is alive, stirring and overflowing with "pep." Because of this discontinuance, very little has been done during this year by the society as a whole. However each member has done his bit in subscribing to such patriotic causes as the Red Cross, Liberty Loans, War Orphans, and Thrift Stamps. Ten former members as well as two critics, Mr. Hanna and Mr. Gibson, took an active part in the winning of the war by enlisting in some branch of the service.

The present officers are:

KARL LUNDBERG.....	President
JULIAN FRANKENBERG.....	Vice-president
CLINTON SWENSON.....	Secretary
CHARLES WHITING.....	Treasurer
BURTRAND HARTMAN.....	Student Critic
WILLARD PARSONS.....	Program Critic
ELMER JOHNSON.....	Prosecuting Critic
MR. BEN HANNA.....	Faculty Critic
SOL OPPENHEIM.....	Press Agent

If through the efforts of the society there is a return of interest in debate, oratory, and other forms of public speaking throughout the school, the society exists not in vain but for the betterment of the school.

Dramatic Club

LELAN D BURROUGHS, Faculty Critic

IT has been the dream of Rockford High School to possess a dramatic club which could stand up with the other organizations of the school. This year, under Mr. Burroughs, this dream has been realized. Mr. Burroughs has had a great deal of experience in this line, and under his hand the Dramatic Club has flourished.

It is the aim of the society to promote interest in the art of public speaking and in dramatics. We are not all dramatic artists, but this is a place in which you may cultivate the talent which you have. Many people have talent but are afraid of criticism, but in the Dramatic Club, all criticisms are just and helpful. All help each other and the results have been gratifying.

The members have been divided into groups of twelve members each. Each group furnishes the program for one of the meetings, and with their chairman, they try to outdo any group which has preceded them.

The programs consist of readings, music, scenes from standard plays and some oratorical selections. Each member is expected to appear when his section is called upon, and he seldom fails us.

After the program, we have a short business meeting where the people are given good parliamentary drill. In the sale of tickets for the play, She Stoops to Conquer, the society proved to have plenty of "pep," as the crowded house showed that night.

At the second meeting of the club, officers were elected and are as follows: President, Vivian Hrdlicka; Vice-President, Mary Goddard; Secretary, Erwin Cornelius; Treasurer, Clyde Lyddon.

There are about sixty members in this organization at the present time, and we hope that next year there will be a larger enrollment. This is an organization which deserves the co-operation of every student in the school, and we are looking forward to a prosperous year.

MUSIC

Girls' Glee Club

THE Girls' Glee Club was organized for this year during the latter part of September under the leadership of Miss Denewith and with a membership of sixteen. The girls made their places on the Glee club after a tryout before a committee who judged the voices.

The girls made their first public appearance when they sang before the night school in December. The school heard them first when they sang at the Christmas assembly in the Auditorium.

From this time on, the Glee club made frequent appearances, singing again and again for the Girls' Community Service League, and before other audiences. In the latter part of March, they gave several numbers during the intermission of the play "She Stoops to Conquer."

Their concert was given on May 23rd, when an audience of friends enjoyed the splendid music of the club.

The annual party was given on the evening of February 21. The quaint colonial costumes worn by the hostesses of the evening made a very attractive appearance. Dancing was the feature of the evening, and what a lovely dance it was! Mr. and Mrs. Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. DuFrain, and other members of our faculty were guests of the occasion.

For the first semester the officers were: President, Ruth Hotchkiss; Vice-President, Helen Stokes; Secretary, Elizabeth Gross; Treasurer, Lillian Chapman; Librarian, Bernita Harrington; and Reporter, Mildred Mitchell.

For the second semester they were: President, Ruth Hotchkiss; Vice-President, Helen Stokes; Secretary, Madge Waisner; Treasurer, Elizabeth Gross; Librarian, Bernita Harrington; and Reporter, Gertrude Adolph.

The glee club looks forward to a large enrollment next year, and a prosperous season in 1919 and 1920.

R. H. S. Male Quartet

THE latest addition to the musical organizations of the school is the male quartet.

At the Christmas Party, four boys were asked to sing as a quartet; this they did and were accepted with great applause. It was later decided to make the quartet a permanent organization, under the leadership of a member of the school faculty. This act was heartily endorsed by the officers of the school. In this way the Male Quartet of the Rockford High School came into existence.

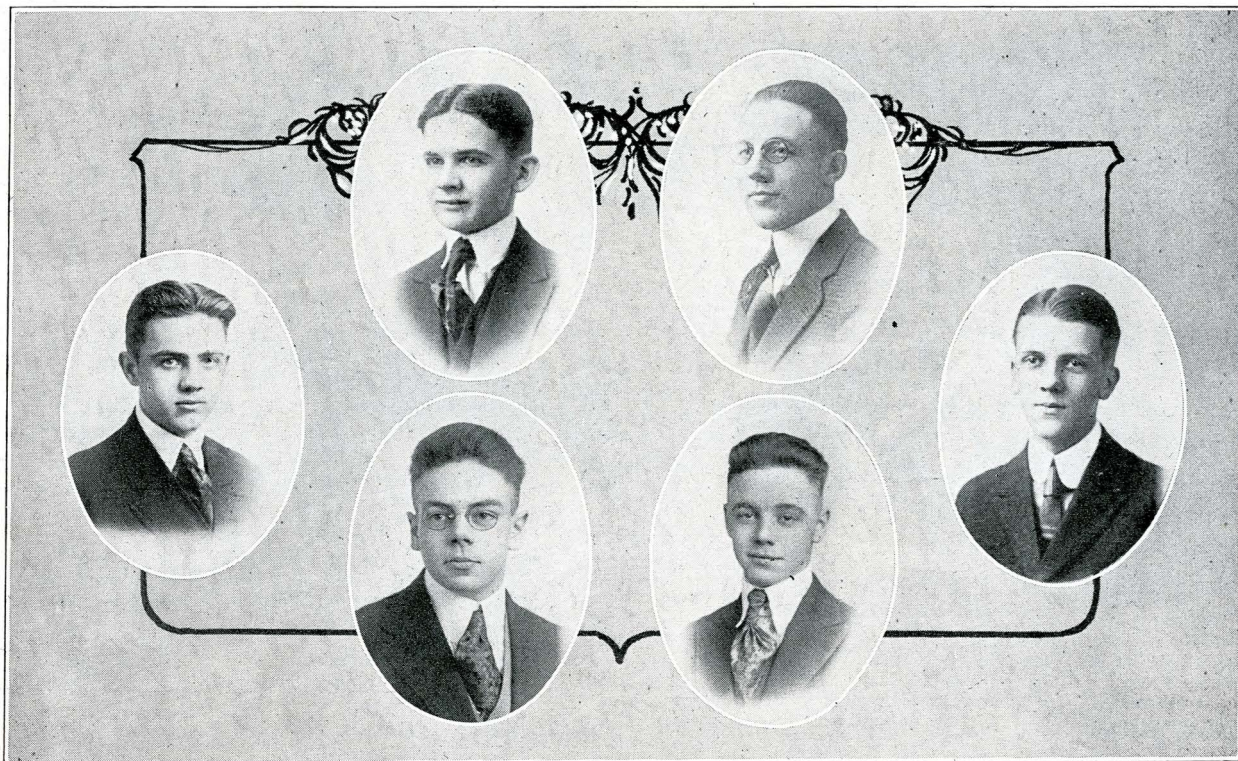

Under the directorship of Mr. J. E. Borner the quartet has become an organization that the school can be proud of. Harold Williams and George McCausland are the "birds," they being the tenor singers, while Jack Bodorff and Vilas Johnson are the upholders of the bass parts. Burdette Sowle has very ably served the singers as their accompanist.

Wherever the quartet has appeared they have been greeted with enthusiasm, the first appearance being at the play given by the Public Speaking Department, when they sang some very pleasing numbers.

Besides making many trips to nearby towns, and appearing in many local churches as entertainers the quartet has given many concerts at Camp Grant, where they were cordially entertained.

As Williams, McCausland, and Bodorff graduate with the class of '19, Johnson will be the only remaining member, but applications for membership have been made for the coming year, and it is hoped that the Quartet will remain a part of the musical organizations for which our school is distinguished.

R. H. S. Orchestra

J. E. BORNOR, Director.

AT the opening of school in September this year, a call was made for all those interested in the organization of a High School Orchestra. A group of "boosting" students responded and our present orchestra is the result. The officers were elected, rehearsals started at once, and on Wednesday and Thursday nights, sad and anything but tuneful sounds came from the lower cells of the old building. It was not long, however, until those sounds began to take on more melodious garb, and at times faint shuffling of feet could be heard in the halls.

Seriously though, great musical development has been made by the many players who began their work with Mr. Bornor last September. It seemed hardly possible at that time that such excellent work could be obtained from such young material.

The Orchestra has played at various functions in the High School and city and has received many a compliment. The first Annual Concert which was given on the night of April twenty-fifth in the High School Auditorium was a great success. With the proceeds Mr. Bornor has purchased instruments for the permanent use of the organization and is planning on enlarging the Orchestra next year by including a greater variety of instruments.

Judging from the success of the first year's work, much can be expected of our High School Orchestra next year.

R. H. S. Band

J. T. HAIGHT, Director.

THE season of 1918-1919 has indeed been a successful one for the oldest organization of the school, namely the Band. It was organized in 1907 under its present director, Mr. J. T. Haight, and has the distinction of being the oldest organization of its kind in the country. The many difficulties and obstacles incident to the establishment and growth of the Band have been overcome by the unswerving loyalty of the boys, and by the intelligent and kindly leadership of Mr. Haight.

Two weeks were spent last June at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, with a beneficial result. The Band played for all home football games, including the particularly wet one Thanksgiving Day. Nearly all draft contingents were headed by the Band, and on Peace Day, November 11, it did heroic work, playing on the streets three different times during the day. All basketball games found the Band in their stand in the gym. balcony, playing and rooting in their usual loyal manner. Six of the seven sessions of the District tournament were assisted by the Band, and to still further show their loyalty, the team was escorted by the Band to the Illinois Central station, on the first step of their journey to the State tourney.

Large and appreciative audiences enjoyed the annual concerts this year, February 14-15, and they were pronounced successful from every standpoint.

We are pleased to credit an extract from the Rockford Morning Star of February 15. "The boys showed a precision of attack, unity of rhythm, quality of tone, and conception of phrasing that would do justice to veteran musicians, and draft need not be made on the charity usually extended to amateur musical events when the concert is characterized as a veritable triumph."

The concerts furnish the only revenue the Band realizes, and the support of the student body was gratifying to the members and Mr. Haight.

Probably the greatest problem the Band has to contend with is the graduation of members. This year the Band is rather hard hit, as several of the prominent members graduate. Despite the loss of these men, there are 33 remaining members, beside a number of reserves who have been practicing faithfully the past semester, and who may enter the first band in September.

Thus the Band which enjoys a statewide reputation for its ability, anticipates a most successful year for the season 1919-1920.

Rex: "What is the height of your ambition?"
Sody: "I don't know, but she comes about to my shoulder."

"May I print a kiss upon your lips?" I asked.
The pretty maiden nodded her sweet permission.

We went to press and I rather guess
We printed a large edition.

Mrs. Dunn: "Why was this called the dark period?"

Ingrid: "Because there were so many knights."

Ted: "Did your watch stop when it hit the floor?"

Joe: "Certainly! Did you think it went thru?"

Sister-Mister-Kister-
Mister Kister
Mister Kister Sister
Sister Mister
Mister Mister Sister
Sister Mister Mister
Mister Kister
Mister Kister Sister—
And they lived long and happily ever after.
Do you get me?
I DO.

Red: "Baker eats weenies every noon, doesn't he?"

Harold: "Yes. It's no wonder he makes puppy love to Helen in the afternoon."

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said
As he stubbed his toe against the bed—
—??—!!!—??—*?!

A girl was walking thru the woods with her lover.

"What is your favorite flower, dear?" she asked softly.

The youth thought a moment then clearing his throat answered:

"Well I believe I like whole wheat best."

Miss Denewith: "Why don't you pause? Don't you see it is marked rest?"

Pianist: "Yes, but I'm not tired."

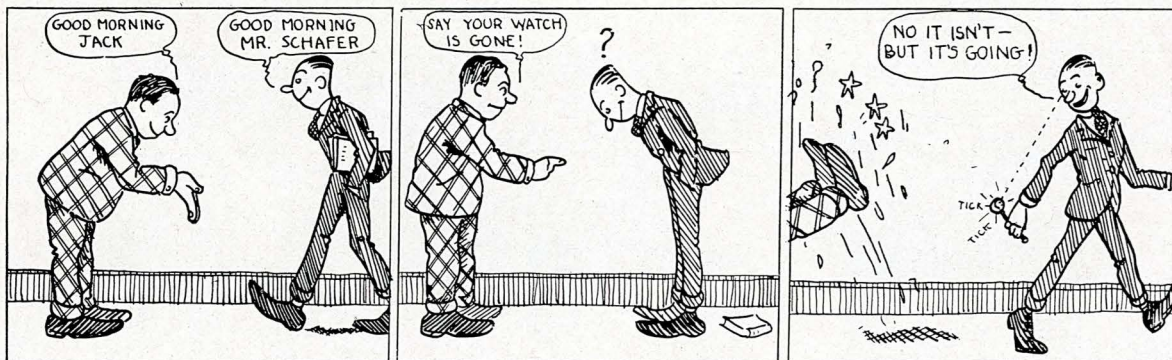

Mr. Hunter: "The three fellows in the back row were the only ones who had a correct answer."

Senior: "That's the team work, fellows."

"Did you ever hear of the fellow who had water on the knee?"

"No, what did he do?"

"Bought a pair of pumps."

"CAN YOU BEAT IT"

CONDITIONS OF A FRESHMAN

Too young to work
Too weak to walk
Too lazy to read
Too bashful to talk
Too eager to eat
Too ardent to drink
Too tired to write
Too dumb to think.

Freshman: "What are the flags up in the AUD for?"

Junior: "Oh, Calvin Boyle was here on time this morning."

LATIN

Flunko-flunkere-faculty-fireum.

Katheryn: "Have you heard about that bashful wri/t watch, Fran?"

Fran: "No, what about it?"

Katheryn: "It holds its hands in front of its face."

Customer: "How's your business?"

Merchant: "Oh, variable! Over in the mattress section it's so quiet you can hear the bed ticking, but here in the towels we're so busy you can't hear the crash."

Nancy Bond: "Kiss you! I should say not! I never kissed a man in my life."

Bob: "You haven't anything on me."

Dorothy: "What's the name of the Senior play?"

Dorothea: "Mice and Men."

Dorothy: "It would seem a little more exciting if it were "Mice and Women."

Stranger at RHS: "Who is that good looking fellow over there?"

"Oh! you mean Bennett?"

Stranger: "No, I mean that intelligent looking chap."

A matter of etiquette will often puzzle people, like the long lady who sat next Mr. Haight at breakfast. She had the misfortune to spill an egg on the floor.

"Oh, Mr. Haight," said she. "What shall I do? I've dropped an egg on the floor."

"I think," said Mr. Haight, who could not resist the opportunity. "I think if I were you, I'd cackle."

Mr. McDonald: "Name a few of the exceptionally long reigns in history."

Senior: "Well, I guess the flood would head the list."

Mr. Jones: "If we were going to study copper, we must have at hand some—?"

Red: "Copper."

Mr. Jones: "Quite right. Now if we were to study the brain we must—?"

Red: "Have one."

We had a dream the other nite,
When everything was still,
We dreamed that each subscriber
Came up and paid his bill.
Oh what a dream!

"Slow, isn't it?"

"Yes, very."

"Let's leave."

"I can't. I'm the hostess."

He sent his boy to college
And now he cries "Alack"
I spent a million dollars,
And got a quarter-back.

Mr. Jones was just covering the hood of his Ford with a blanket when Williams appeared.

"No use, Mr. Jones, I saw it."

Jack: "Why doesn't a cook chew her apron?"

Dink: "I don't know. Why?"

Jack: "Because it always goes against her stomach."

"CAN YOU BEAT IT"

A Senior who dreaded a test
Studied hard for a week without rest
But in spite of his cram,
He flunked his exam—
The choir will now sing—by request.

The following was from the society column of a small town newspaper:

"The bride's gift from the bridegroom was a beautiful diamond pin, as well as many other pieces of cut glass."

"Say, old man, don't act like that. Why, you're so old you're in your second childhood."
"Yes sir, and I'm enjoyin' it more than I did the first."

Freshman: "What are they having in there, a prayer meeting?"

Senior: "No, that's the 1920 class meeting."

Harry: "That, Sally, is a garter snake."
Sally: (Innocently) "What! That little thing? It's much too small."

Pooch: "Hi Bill, Fishing?"
Bill: "No, drowning worms."

She: "What a finely chisled mouth you have. It ought to be on some girls face."
He: "I never miss any opportunities."

There is a boy who never drinks
Nor smokes, nor chews, nor swears
Who never gambles, never flirts
And shuns all sinful snares
He's paralyzed.

There is a boy who never does
A thing that is not right
His ma can tell just where he is
At morning, noon and night.
He's dead.

Had old Noah in foresight been up to the mark
He'd have killed those two flies as they entered the ark.

A sleeper from the Amazon
Put nighties of his Granamazon
The reason for that
He was too fat
To get his own Pagamazon.

Parson Johnson: "De contributoin dis mornin will be for de purpose ob making up the deficit in you pastohs salary. De chior will now sing, and continue to sing until de full amount is collected."

Teacher: "What is the shape of the earth?"
Soph: "Round."
Teacher: "How do you know it is round?"
Soph: "All right, it's square then; I don't want to start any argument."

"Did you ask Mississippi if she would let Delaware Georgias New Jersey which she bought in New York?"
"No, but Alaska."

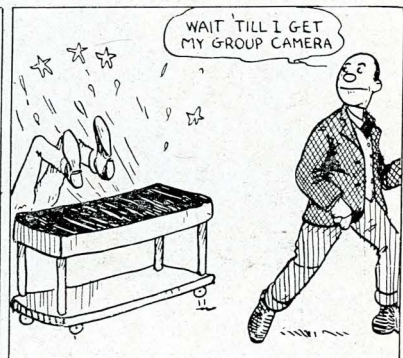

"Mary, did you give fresh water to the gold-fish?"
"No, mum, they ain't drunk up what I gave them yesterday."

Patient—"Why does a small cavity seem so large to the tongue?"
Dentist—"Just the natural tendency of the tongue to exaggerate, I suppose!"

"Does that new restaurant serve good food?"
"Splendid. Why? even the proprietor dines there."

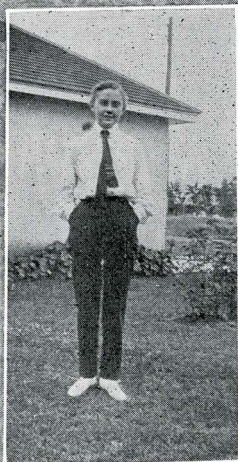

Teacher: "Do you know, Johnnie, where shingles were first used?"
Johnnie (modestly): "I'd rather not tell."

Bookworm: "Did you know they used to fight in pajamas in the olden days?"
Angleworm: "Impossible!"
Bookworm: "It says right here, 'and ye goode King Arthur went forthe into battle with his royale knightes.'"

Temperence

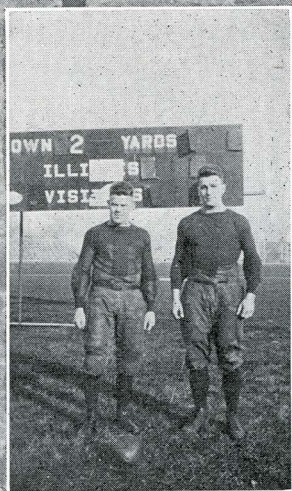

Clothes make the man.

"Skin" on K.P.

Ruffneck (?)

At Illinois.

Well! Well!

Smile, Mary Sue

"CAN YOU BEAT IT"

Mother: "There, now, don't whip Johnny. You know the Bible says, 'Let not the sun descend upon your wrath.'"

Father: "That's all right; but it doesn't say not to let your wrath descend upon the son."

First Soldier (looking at portraits of himself): "Which do you think is the best, Mike?"

Second Soldier: "Well, personally, I think the one of you in the gas mask is the best."

A negro was called upon to give evidence in a burglary case against a prisoner.

"Do you call him a thief?" threateningly demanded counsel for the defense.

"I'm not going to say he's a thief sah, but what I says is dis: If I was a chicken and I saw dat nigger loafin' aroun,' I'd roost high—dat's all!"

"No, mum," said a wounded soldier regretfully, "I never shot a German, an' I had a good chance, too. The 'Uns was chargin' in close order. 'Shoot at will!' shouted our captain. 'Which one is he?' I asks; an' before anyone could tell me I got hit in the chest!"

Father: "Why are children so much worse than they used to be?"

Grandfather: "I attribute it to improved ideas in building."

Father: "How so?"

Grandfather: "Shingles are scarce, and you can't spank a boy with a tin roof."

Father: "That cat was making an awful noise in the back garden last night."

Arnold: "Yes, Father; I think that since he ate the canary he thinks he can sing."

Don't see why a close-fisted person is called "a hard-boiled egg." A hard-boiled egg shells out willingly enough.

It was dawn, and very chilly in camp, and one man was unable to find any of his outer garments. He wandered about, asking all his mates if they knew where they were.

"Has anyone seen my b-b-blanket?" he demanded, and was told that no one had.

"Has anyone seen my t-t-trousers?"

No answer.

The unfortunate soldier scratched his head for a moment.

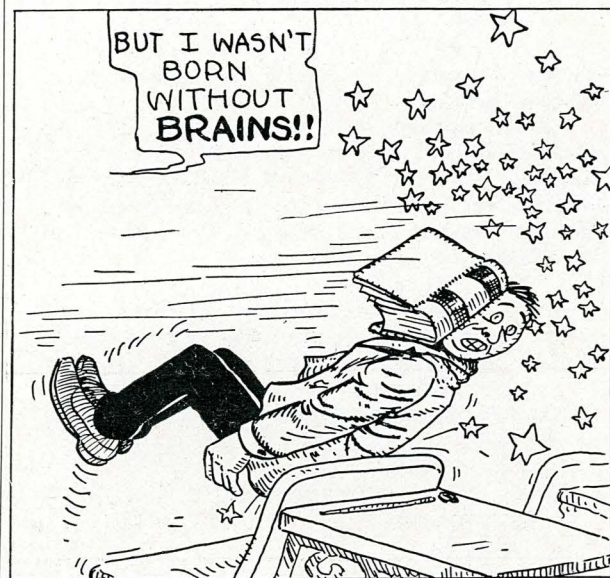

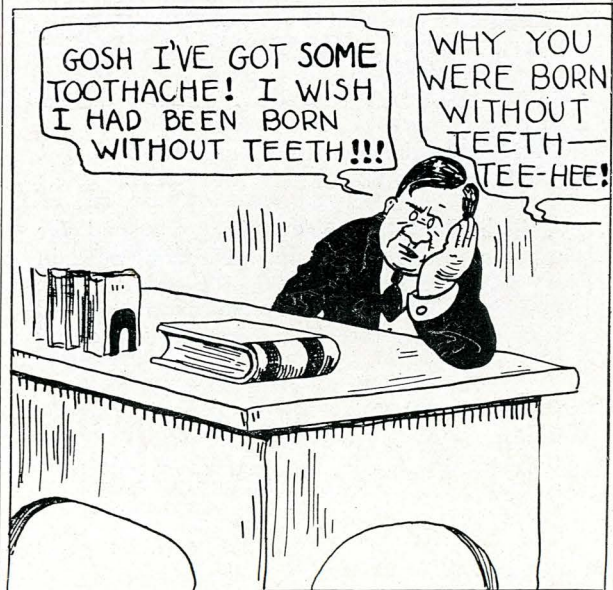

"Well, I'm g-g-g-glad I have on a nice w-w-warm pair of sus-sus-suspenders."

"Pa, will you give me a good licking right now?"

"Why this, Lemuel?"

"I'm going to sneak off and go swimming, and I don't want to be bothered with a future."

OUTBURSTS OF H. T. HAIGHT

"The army must be a terrible place," said Aunt Samantha, looking up from the evening paper.

"What makes you think so, Samantha?" asked her dutiful spouse.

"Why, jest think what it must be where beds is bunk and meals is a mess."

Sam S.: "What's the matter with that man? Has he got St. Vitis dance?"

Bob S.: "Nope, that's a deaf and dumb man talking and he stutters."

"CAN YOU BEAT IT"

Curious Charlie: "Do nuts grow on trees?"
 Patrol Leader: "They do, old chap."
 Curious Charlie: "Then what tree does the doughnut grow on?"
 Patrol Leader: "The 'Pantree,' I think."

"Dad, what are the silent watches of the night?"
 "They are the ones which their owners forgot to wind, my son!"

A little Irishman was being examined for admission to the army. He seemed all right in every way except one. The doctor said, "You're a little stiff." Quickly the Irish blood mounted as the applicant retorted, "And you're a big stiff!"

Customer: "Waiter, do you know it is nearly half an hour since I ordered that soup?"
 Waiter: "Yes, sir; but you know how slow turtles are!"

"Pa, why do they say in the market reports that wheat is nervous?"
 "I guess, Son, it is because it expects to be thrashed."

An intelligent Frenchman was studying the English language.
 "When I discovered that if I was quick I was fast," said he, "that if I was tied I was fast, and if I spent too freely I was fast, I was discouraged!"
 "But when I came across the sentence, 'The first one won one prize,' I was tempted to give up trying to learn English."

An objection was recently made against drowning stray dogs for fear that so many sunken barks might obstruct shipping.

Jones: "Did you go to the oyster supper at the club?"
 Smith: "I did."
 Jones: "Were there many there?"
 Smith: "I found one!"

"Who is this Mr. Less who advertises so much?" asked the dear old lady. "And he seems to deal in everything, too! First it was 'Eat Less Bread,' now it's 'Use Less Gas!'"

As a steamer was leaving the harbor of Athens a well-dressed young passenger approached the captain, and pointing to the distant hills, inquired: "What is that white stuff on the hills, captain?"

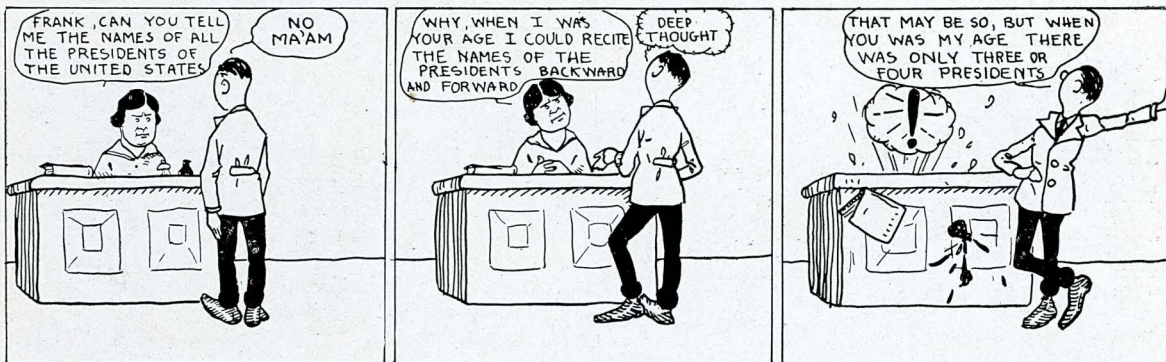

"That is snow," replied the captain.
 "Well," remarked the lady, "I thought so myself, but a gentleman has just told me it was Greece."

"Where were you boys when I called for you to help me an hour ago?" asked Farmer Jones at the supper table. "I was in the barn settin' a hen," said one. "And I was in the loft settin' a saw," answered another. "I was in Grandma's room settin' the clock," came from the third boy. "And I was up in the pantry settin' a trap," said the fourth. "You're a fine set!" remarked the farmer. "And where were you?" he asked, turning to the youngest. "I was on the doorstep settin' still!" was the reply.

"Listen to this, Son," said Mr. Stubb, as he unfolded his scientific paper. "This article states that in some of the old Roman prisons that have been unearthed they found the petrified remains of the prisoners."
 "Gracious, Dad," exclaimed Stubb Jr., with a smile, "they're what they call hardened criminals, I expect."

Officer: "Hang it! you've bought the wrong pair of boots. Can't you see one is black and the other is brown?"
 Raw One: "Sure, sir, but the other pair are just the same."

Comfort to the Editor: "When you're down in the mouth think of Jonah, he came out all right."

"CAN YOU BEAT IT"

Katheryn: "I don't like your hair."

Bernie: "I didn't pick out the color of my hair. There was a time when you could choose anything you like but these days you're lucky if you can pick your own teeth."

Shopper: "Do you keep stationary?"

Floor-walker: "No, madam; if I did I'd lose my job."

Nora: "Why did you accept the third time he proposed?"

Dora: "Because he said it would be the last time."

They sat looking at her engagement ring. "Did your friends admire it?" he tenderly inquired.

"Three of them did more than that," she replied. "Three of them recognized it."

Colored Mammy: "I wants to see Mistah Cummins."

Office Boy: "Mr. Cummings is engaged."

Colored Mammy: "Bless you sonny, I don't want to marry him."

Anna: "Were hearts trump?"

Bella: "Yes, Jack was going to lead with a diamond, but father spoiled the suit."

A voice: "Mary, what are you doing out on the porch?"

Mary: "I'm looking at the moon."

Voice: "Well tell the moon to go home and come in off that porch."

Big Brother: "John, there must be a lot of iron in your system."

John: "Why do you think so?"

Big Brother: "Because you lose your temper when you get hot!"

Bill B.: "Ed is an awful ladies man."

Joe M.: "I believe it. I've seen him with some awful ladies."

"I thank you for the flowers you sent," she said,

And then she pouted, blushed and dropped her head.

"Forgive me for those words I spoke last night;

The flowers have sweetly proved that you were right."

Then I forgave her, took her hand in mine, Sealed her forgiveness with the Old, old sign; And as we wandered thru the dim lit flowers I wondered who had really sent those flowers.

Wife: (stylishly dressed for the matinee) "Tell me the quickest way to get to the Palace Theater."

Husband: "Put on a wider skirt."

"They tell me that Doc Wise is an awful grumbler."

"He is. He is the kind of fellow that blames his face because it needs shaving."

"Engaged to four girls at once," exclaimed the horrified uncle.

"How do you account for such conduct?"

"I don't know," said the graceless nephew. Cupid must have shot me with a machine gun."

Fran K.: "Did you ever try to convince a man that he is wrong?"

Fran C.: "Well not exactly. I usually get him to believe that I am right and let it go at that."

"At any rate, there's one advantage in having a wooden leg," said Old Giles, the village optimist.

"And what's that?" asked a friend.

"Well yo' can keep yer socks up wi' tacks instead of having to buy garters."

"Oh mother," wailed Jimmy.

"Look at my hand. I just cut my finger on the cat."

"Did you hear what they do with the transports when they're late?"

"No, what do they do?"

"Dock 'em."

Naval Examining Officer (to seaman seeking promotion): "What is the boom?"

Seaman: "Why, sir, it's the noise a cannon makes when she's fired."

"This does not seem to be a very good day for fish," remarked a man on the bank of a stream to an angler who had sat for four hours without a nibble.

"Oh, I don't know!" replied the angler calmly. "I don't see why the fish should complain. I'm the one who ought to do so!"

Miss Duffey: "Mr. North, do you understand this?"

Mr. North: "Yes, I do."

Miss Duffey: "Then, of course the rest of the class does."

"Hello, Smith, I hear you went fishing yesterday! What time did you go?"

"Four-thirty a. m. train out."

"Any luck?"

"Yes."

"What did you catch?"

"Six-thirty train home!"

Miss Murdock: "Kenneth have you your theme written?"

Kenn Lee: "Yes, here it is."

Miss Murdock: (reading) "This is very poorly written and the composition is terrible. I've a good mind to report to your father about this."

Kenn Lee: "Do it; I don't care. He wrote it."

Mac: "A man fell from a six-story window yesterday and didn't get hurt."

Duff—"What is he, an aviator?"

Mac: "No. But you see he had on a light fall suit."

On the film the hero sends a telegram: "Have just married a Spanish dream."

Fran C.: "Imagine someone calling me a dream."

Marion T.: "Nobody would call you a dream. You'd be a nightmare."

Ginger: "If a burglar came into your cellar, would the coal shoot?"

Peg: "No, but the kindling wood."

Red: "Did you ever see a man-eating shark?"

Bill G.: "No, but I saw a man eating cat-fish."

Red: "Where."

Bill G.: "In a restaurant."

Mother: "Dear you had better not go to the dance tonight; your rubbers leak."

Burdette: "Never mind. I have my pumps inside them."

Mrs. Borner: "MY husband went to church this morning."

Mrs. Burroughs: "Our Sunday paper didn't come either."

Joe S.: "I have so much on my hands at present that I don't know what to do."

Red: "Why not try some soap and water."

Betty: "What's weighing on your mind, Tommy?"

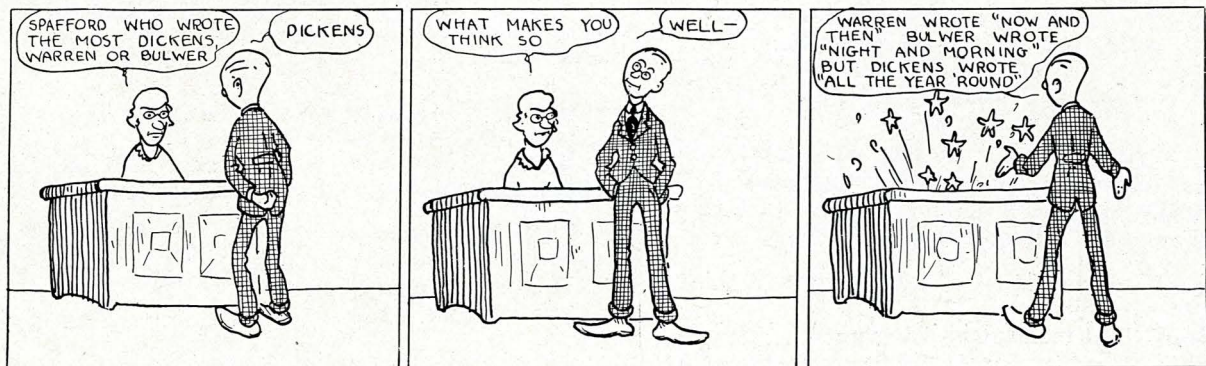

Tommy: "Do you think my mind is a pair of scales?"

Betty: "Er-no, if you want to be precise about it, scales are evenly balanced."

He: "Most girls, I have found don't appreciate real music."

Second He: "Why do you say that?"

He: "Well, you may pick beautiful strains on a mandolin for an hour and she won't even look out the window, but just you honk your horn and—out she comes."

"CAN YOU BEAT IT"

—DISCOVERIES—

Peroxide isn't any good for class cuts.
You can light a Fatima on either end.
An umbrella can be used as a cane on a clear day.

A towel can be used for dusting your shoes as well as drying your hands.

Frank North: "I'm going to see that new show. There is a company of 120 people."

Ed. Reitch: "What has that to do with it."

Frank: "Nothing except that they only carry one trunk."

"What made you stay out of the hall the last dance," he asked?

"A stay out," replied the maid, rubbing her side.

She: "Why do you think marriage is such a hard proposition?"

He: "Well, you see, it takes grit to propose, sand to go thru with the ceremony, and rocks to support a wife."

"Sedentary work," said the college lecturer, "tends to lessen the endurance."

"In other words," butted in the smart student, "the more one sits, the less one can stand."

"Exactly," retorted the lecturer; "and if one lies a great deal, one's standing is lost completely."

The inspector was asking the class a few questions.

"Now, how do bees dispose of their honey?" he inquired.

"Please, sir, they cell it," announced the clever boy of the class.

SUCH IS LIFE

I was seated in a hammock
My little girl and I
While the soft mellow moon
Beamed forth from the sky

I asked her one slight question
My heart was filled with hope
But I never got her answer
For my brother cut the rope.

DON'T GET ROUGH, STUKE

Frankie North: (Chemistry) "Got a match?"
Stuke Sowle: "I'm your match. Strike me and find out. I'll light on you."

She: " (About 11:30) "I don't know a thing about baseball."

He: "Let me explain it to you."

She: "Very well; give me an illustration of a home run."

BE CAREFUL

A farmer once to Chem. Lab. strayed,
Oh, 'tis sad to tell
Mixed NO² with glycerine
It blew the J²L.

A SURPRISE FOR HIM

"My husband is going to give a lot of things for Christmas."

"How do you know?"

"I've bought most of them already."

SARCASM

Proud Mother: "My unmarried daughter has an extremely rich doctor calling on her regularly now."

Envious Neighbor: "My, when he gets through your daughter'll have an awful doctor's bill, won't she?"

SATISFIED FOR ONCE

Mrs. Doyle: "My husband and I went to church this morning, and I'm glad to say he slept all during the sermon."

Mrs. Boyle: "Glad? Why?"

Mrs. Doyle: "Because the minister preached against the vanity and extravagance of women."

SELFISH

He: "I don't mind Madge kissing her dog, but I prefer to have her kiss me before and not after."

She: "How selfish of you. Don't you suppose that Fido has his preference too?"

EXPERIENCED

"You say he inherited his money only a short time ago? Then it ought to be easy for a sharper to separate him from his fortune."

"Don't fool yourself. He waited twenty years to get it."

Husband: (Father of six daughters) "There's a gentleman in the drawing room who wants to marry one of our daughters. He's a wine merchant."

Wife: "A wine merchant? Thank goodness. Then he will be sure to select one of the older brands."

Betty: "I think he wants to marry me."

Gert.: "Has he said so?"

Betty: "Not in so many words. But he's begun agreeing with father's political views."

Little drops of water
Frozen on the walk
Make the naughty adjectives
Mix in people's talk.

"I hear you are the flower of your family."
"Yes, a blooming idiot."

Mohawk Quality

is more than a NAME

We didn't take on the Mohawk line of tires blindly.

We investigated and endeavored to pick the tire which would give the greatest mileage and give it the most consistently.

We chose the Mohawk line because we found the Mohawk Company has never had a bad year as most tire companies have. From the beginning their tires have been uniform—always good—always giving the buyer a square deal for his money. We believe that this is the sort of tire that our customers want on which to build a permanent, profitable business.

Printers with a Policy

CENTURIES ago, for the entertainment of a group of children—so runs the story—Johann Gutenberg carved letters of the alphabet on individual cubes of wood and strung them together. He found that words might be spelled out in this way; and from a game for children, printing came into existence. Since that early day, it has progressed until it is now one of the fine arts.

Forsaken by God and by men,

And I murmured over and over,

I'd never eat onions again.

WE AGREE WITH YOU

Gang Foreman: (To Pooch Burr, looking for a job) "No, we have enough men now."

Pooch: "Aw, I should think you could hire me, the little work I'd do."

THAT'S SAFE, THEN

Ted: "May I kiss you?"

Harriet: "Mother wouldn't like it."

Ted: "Mother isn't going to get it."

CLASS SONG 1919

Words:

D. Wilcox

E. Stuckey

Music:

H. Lamont

I

With poets and musicians
And artists by the score
And athletes in our brilliant ranks
Their like ne'er seen before.
Our scholars with great toil
Have climbed upward thru four years.
Of our great classmates
Now the whole wide world shall hear.

Chorus:

We are the Class of Nineteen
We're climbing to the top;
And nothing shall block our way
'Til with success we stop.
To Nineteen we'll be loyal,
It's Banner high we'll hold.
And nothing shall besmirch our Flag
Banner of Green and Gold.

II

Bring forth the royal Banner
It's glorious folds fling high.
The Class of Nineteen Nineteen
In triumph passes by.
Let Crimson and the Black
Be entwined with Green and Gold
In worthy recognition
of our class-mates bold.
